When Telephoning

Observation of the following suggestions will help your telephone service: Always call by number; never by name. Be absolutely sure of the number; look it up in the telephone directory. Eliminate unnecessary conversation; make necessary conversations brief. Speak distinctly and listen carefully; this makes repetition unnecessary. When you go to the telephone have your thoughts lined up so they can be expressed briefly.

Gave Seven Sons To The Cause

The following article was sent to us for publication by a former Kent Co. boy, hoping that some Kent county mother who had given her son to the cause would see that there are others who have made even greater sacrifices.

The article sent us follows:

Redwood City, Cal., June 13.—Giving seven sons to her country, but too poor to buy the seven-starred service flag she longs for!

That sums up the quality of America's champion war mother's patriotism.

To say that her loyalty transcends that of other women is to make invidious distinctions in the ranks of the grand army of soldiers' mothers. But Mrs. Wyman's gift carries with it a peculiar sacrifice.

It has meant hardship, breadwinning for a crippled woman at 57 and actual poverty.

"My boys," she says with simple eloquence, "are my Liberty Loan to Uncle Sam."

"I've had interest on them in advance, for they have been goods sons and they have been well treated by the grand country for which they have offered their lives!"

Almost every branch of the service has been enriched by Mrs. Wyman's heroic gift. The sons under arms are:

David, in the cavalry.
Victor, lieutenant, Q. M. C.
Charles, Q. M. C.
John, sergeant, Signal Corps.
James, Field Artillery.
Eugene, infantry.
Francis, sailor, S. S. Cincinnati.

All volunteered except Charles, who, the boys agreed, was to remain at home and care for the mother. Listed in the draft, however, he valiantly followed his brothers, with no claim for exemption.

There's another son, Henry, 13, who is in school. He has already announced that he will join the colors as soon as he's old enough.

"I'd sort of hoped my baby boy would stay at with me," explained Mrs. Wyman, "but if he wants to go I'll not say a word!"

For seven years this valiant giver of sons to freedom's cause has been crippled. Six years ago the husband died. The family moved from the ranch to this litle California town. And her sons made life comfortable for the grey-haired mother.

When America entered the war the Wyman boys were among the first to enlist.

"Mother," they said, "we're going."

"That's right, boys," she replied—"God bless you!"

And so they marched away.

They made out allotments for her from their soldier pay. But, through some inexplicable hitch, Mrs. Wyman has received but $20 a month. It is not enough for her and the two young children left home to live on. She supplements the meagre income by taking care of the neighbors' babies while the mothers are at work.

"I can't understand why I haven't received my allotments," she said without criticism. "But it will come out all right. I've done my part by Uncle Sam and I know he'll do his part by me."

"When my boys write me, asking whether I'm getting along well, I always say, 'Yes.' No use bothering them with my little troubles—they have such big ones to tackle!"

Mrs. Wyman now lives in a little two-room cottage, meagerly furnished and bordered by a war garden. Above the door hangs a tiny, faded flag, and on the pane is a Red Cross emblem.

"The little house that isn't painted—out on the Woodland road"—that's the way they direct you to the home of America's champion war mother, down here in Redwood City.

Many of the townspeople don't even know her name, but they all know and revere the crippled mother as "the woman who has given her seven sons to the war."

In the center of the humble living room stands a table with a box. The box is filled with letters from her boys. And every night she writes to them.

"Sometimes," she explained, "my letters have to wait several days. You know postage at 3 cents a letter amounts to something when there are seven to send daily.

"But these are such little things"—with that ready smile—"I try not to worry. And I always write my boys cheerful letters. I simply won't annoy them.

"I want them to be as good soldiers as they have been sons.

"Neither I nor America could ask more of them!"

It's a home, this Wyman place—as humble as a Lincoln's cabin—that will mellow your American pride with a gulp in the throat—the kind of home in which the roots of democracy rest deep and imperishable.

The Biggest American Soldier

The biggest soldier in any of the allied forces now serving in France has been discovered. He is a U. S. Marine! His name is Q. M. Sergeant Pat Grealy.

Grealy has always had the reputation of being a "whale of a man," but it wasn't until he got to dodging Boche shells in France that his fellow fighters fully realized just how big he was.

The first time an "alert" was sounded after his company got up front, Grealy made a dash for a dugout and got wedged tight in the entrance. All efforts to get him out were of no avail, until six former football stars in the company were called upon to "rush" him through.

They had to enlarge the entrance before they could get him out.
