Seek to reverse baby death verdict

ANNAPOLIS — Attorneys for Uesli Watson, the East Baltimore man who was convicted of first degree murder in the drowning of a new-born baby, asked the Court of Appeals to reverse the decision on Thursday.

The lawyers argued that the man was convicted by Judge Michael J. Manley on evidence that should not have been admitted by the court and on "the insufficiently corroborated testimony of an accomplice to the crime."

Watson was given life imprisonment in the death of the baby whose body was recovered from the Patapsco River. He was accused of murdering a baby born to Miss Bernice Washington, 500 block N. Fulton Ave. on July 22, 1954.

Miss Washington received a five year term as an accessory.

Pajama tot goes a-wandering

Hikes four miles with bottle

BRANDON BEARD & MOTHER

Blood hounds, state troopers, civilians and boy scouts searched six hours through the Blue Ridge Mountains last week for a 2-year-old Baltimore boy, who left his grandmother's home, clad only in his pajamas and nursing his morning bottle.

Brandon Beard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Beard, 2219 E. Chase St., was visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Fannie Beard in Craigsville, Va., when he decided to take the four-mile hike.

It was 9 on Thursday morning and Brandon had been put in his crib for a morning nap while Mrs. Beard worked in her garden.

NO SOONER had the grandmother left the house, when the child crawled out of bed, tucked the bottle under his arm and went traipsing down a back path which led to the mountains.

Mrs. Beard immediately sent out a statewide alarm to friends and relatives to be on the alert for the missing child.

The call for help echoed back to Baltimore which set Brandon's mother, a school teacher at School No. 137, and father, a salesman, in a panic.

While the parents worried with other Baltimoreans, the posse searched for the child.

Brandon, completely unaware of the excitement he had caused, strolled on, nursing his bottle now and then and stopping to play in the dirt.

Along the way, he had a little mishap which meant abandoning the pants to his pajamas, but other than that, he was doing fine.

By late afternoon, he decided to take a rest in a dried creek bed and that's where his rescuers found him.

AS THE MASS of people and dogs surrounded the dirt-smudged child, Brandon looked at them nonchalantly, smiled and presented the empty bottle.

And Brandon's feet were a little sore too, but not from the long hike. He had picked up two splinter somewhere along the way.

police reported.

As the teacher entered the building at 9:40 a.m. and started down the hallway, she suffered the fatal attack, police said.

Teaches dies at School 104

Just as she entered the front door at the Robert Brown Elliott Elementary School, No. 104, Carey and Schools Sts., where she was to serve as a substitute teacher, Miss Nellie Neuhausen, 47, white, 2300 block Eutaw Place, suffered a heart attack, Wednesday morning.

Taken to Provident Hospital, Miss Neuhausen was pronounced dead on arrival. The body was taken to the City Morgue where it is scheduled to be claimed by relatives in Tennessee.

Mrs. Roseanna Wynn, 1400 block Central Ave., clerk to the school principal, said she contacted Miss Neuhausen and made arrangements for her to take the place of an absent teacher.

Pupils take exciting plane trip to D.C.

48 eighth graders say 'there's nothing to it'

Some 48 pupils in the eighth grade at Junior High No. 181, Calhoun and Baker Sts. are convinced that "there's nothing to flying."

These experienced youngsters, along with their teachers, Mrs. Corrine W. Selby and Miss Doris Lee, took a plane trip to Washington last Friday and acted like veterans, although most of them had never been on a plane before.

The flight was the culminating activity for the school project "Wings Across the Sky."

ALTHOUGH pleased with the way her pupils reacted, Mrs. Selby declares that she was "worrying" from the time the bus left the school at 10 a.m. Friday until the children returned around 7 p.m. that night. But she admits it was well worth the effort.

Months ago Mrs. Selby got permission from Frank Sorrell, principal, to take the airplane trip. Then all 48 pupils had to bring letters from their parents giving them permission to fly.

But this was only the beginning.

As an English project the teenagers wrote business letters to 17 air lines requesting information and prices.

THEIR BEST Bid, and most cordial letter, came from Capitol Airlines, so the teacher selected this company for the flight. Capitol not only offered a good price, but it gave the children free lunch, goodies, and gave them a tour of Friendship Airport in Baltimore and the National Airport in Washington.

Besides this, the company sent along James Ford, sales manager, as host.

EVERY CHILD was insured and Mrs. Selby had to fill out the forms in triplicate. The round trip chartered plane cost $250 and bus fare to and from the airport was $20.

The children arrived at school at 9 a.m. Friday and attended their first regular class. They reported to Mrs. Selby at 9:30 a.m. and at 10 a.m. they were in the school auditorium being checked out one by one.

At 10:30 a.m. they arrived at Friendship Airport and toured the airport and its cargo station.

THE PUPILS went to Washington on the same plane which brought the Detroit Lions football team to Baltimore. At 12 noon this plane came in, and the eighth graders got aboard.

Two of the luckiest youngsters in the group were Victor Cole and Van Webb Jr. who rode forward with the pilot on the trip to Washington.

Young Van had designed a plane which he left in the hands of Capitol Airline executives for analysis.

THERE WERE two hostesses on the plane and in a few minutes most of the pupils had received pillows and souvenir folders and napkins.

In Washington, they rested in the Presidential waiting room which had been built on the ground floor for the late President Franklin Roosevelt. Here they watched television and had lunch.

HAYES DEAVER, secretary of Capitol Airlines talked with the group. Later they toured the airport and the maintenance shop.

After buying souvenirs for their folks at home, the group was divided in half for two separate flights back to Baltimore. Both planes carried other passengers.

The flights had to wait over an hour in Washington to take-off because the visibility was low. One reached Baltimore at 5:45 p.m. and the second flight at 6:45 p.m.

MRS. SELBY, when asked if the parents were worried since all of the children were expected back at 5:30 p.m., declared, "No, all of the parents were called by phone when I arrived at Friendship Airport but all of them said they knew the children were in good hands."

However, she did finally admit that Principal Sorrell was pacing the floor until all returned to the school safe and sound.

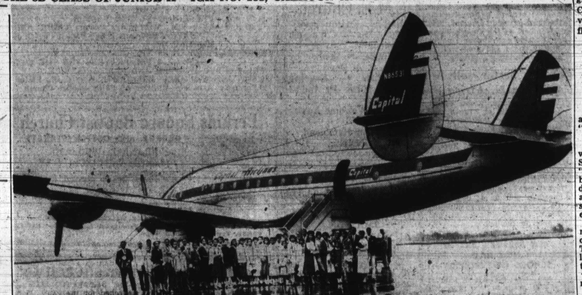
AMONG THE pupils were Miriam Conway, Marie White, Barbara Coleman, Rose Marie Rogers, Paul Brown, Harry West, James Watson, Ruth Broady, Sehla Carter, Judy Webb, Armenda Brooks, Sonia Lynch, Marilyn Polk, Delores Laws, Sylvia Laws.

Zerita Hall, Charles Harris, June Lottier, Patricia Roberts, Alice Wyche, Betty Jackson, Shirley Dilver, Elaine McDowell, Jessie Kerr, Harry Braxton, Alfred Randall, Dorothy Jones, Dale Covington, Victor Cole, Van Webb Jr., James Smith.



Just before take-off for Washington at Friendship Airport, in rain.

Morgan shows top enrollment

1,865 students now at Morgan

Morgan State College enrollment has soared to record proportions with 1,865 students registered for the first semester, Edward N. Wilson, registrar has announced.

A preliminary report which showed registration totals through Saturday, October 1, final date for registration, put the total of former students returning at 1,241, first time freshmen at 550, transfers at 38, and Provident Hospital nurses at 16.

THE TOTAL exceeded by 53 the 1,812 reported for the same period last year.

Mr. Wilson emphasized that the figure may increase slightly through a final count and late registrations.

While a final breakdown by states is not yet available, preliminary estimates showed an increase in foreign enrollment, with Nigeria, Trinidad and Liberia enrolled for the first time.

The college's new and enriched evening program drew 100 non-campus students and found a sizeable portion of the regular day students enrolled for evening classes.

Parents at School 114 organize mothers' club

By ROSALIE T. GRINER

Several parents of first grade pupils at Harriet Tubman Elementary School No. 114 met recently to organize a mothers' club.

The primary aim of the group is to study the characteristics of children, between the ages of 5-7 in order to understand them better and to give the children more help.

Officers of the club are:

Mrs. Lenida Foster, president; Mrs. Hattie McClire, vice president; Mrs. Iantha Brooks, secretary; Mrs. Beatrice Owens, assistant secretary; Mrs. Mildred Lewis, treasurer; Mrs. Mary Williams, chaplain.

SOME PARENTS volunteered to attend classes when necessary and aid the teacher, Mrs. Mernice Holmes is the first grade teacher.

Grades four and five and their teacher, Mrs. Rosalie Kelly, visited School No. 139 where they ate lunch in the school cafeteria.

This was quite an experience for some of the children since school No. 114 has no cafeteria.

Family course open to adults

"Living in the Family" is the title of a new course being offered by the Division of Adult Education, Department of Education, at the Mergenthaler High School, 35th St. and Hillen Rd., every Tuesday at 8:30 p.m.

All parents interested in providing the family atmosphere and guidance which will make their children attain the best development they are capable of are invited to attend this course.

The instructor is Dr. Henry Seidel, instructor in pediatrics at the Hopkins University Medical School.

The series will include such topics as how to get happy cooperation, manage anger and jealousy, make quarrels constructive, set good limits to freedom, relax and enjoy your family, live richly yourselves.

Those interested may register at Tuesday, Oct. 11, at 8:30 p.m.
