'Election stimulates' Baptist convention

"The spirit of the convention is very high. There are more delegates this year than in previous years. The election of a new president has stimulated a lot of interest."

That comment was made Wednesday by the Rev. Jerry A. Moore Jr., one of three vice-presidents of the District Baptist Convention, which closes Friday (Friday) at Mount Bethel Baptist Church, 205 V St., NW.

The Rev. Robert P. Gainey was retiring as president because his health would not permit him to carry on in the office, the Rev. Mr. Moore said.

Delegates would choose between the Rev. Andrew Fowler and the Rev. G. Ellington Stevenson, both vice presidents, who sought the high office.

"THIS is the first time in the 82nd-year history of this church that the convention has met here," said the Rev. L. W. White, pastor of the host church.

"We feel highly honored to be host to this 28th session," he added.

"Christianity and Integration" is the theme of the convention. Some 1,000 delegates and visitors are in attendance.

Clarence T. Johnson is scheduled to speak to delegates tonight (Friday) on the subject of "Christianity and Integration in Employer-Employee Relationships."

SPEAKERS at previous sessions included the Rev. Henry Houston, president of the Baptist Ministers Union, and J. Franklin Wilson, attorney.

"We have a theme centered around social action every session," the Rev. Mr. Moore said. "I'm not running for president. There might be others seeking the office, but we won't know until the nominating committee reports."

The Rev. Mr. Gainey served as presiejent of the convention for two years.
