Adah K. Jenkins' MOMENTS MUSICAL

With extra, unscheduled sound effects supplied by an electric storm, the premiere performance of Herman Schwarz' folk opera "Lil Joe" was given before a warmly appreciative audience at the Little Theatre of Morgan Christian Center.

The libretto, done by Walters Turpin of Morgan College English faculty, revives about the adventures of a street huckster, "Little Joe" (played by Joseph Nettles) and his sweetheart, a high school girl, "Rosie" (Barbara Dungee).

"Aunt Liz" (Dorothy Lee Davis) with her earthy philosophy is guardian of Rosie. The course of true love is interrupted by the mechanitions of Joe's rival, "Bubba," a slick, bad guy (Moore Carson).

There is a fight between the two men and Joe is hauled off to prison by the law (represented by Donald Slaggers) leaving his rival to cunningly bribe "Aunt Liz" and annoy the heroine.

* * *

FATE steps in and Joe receives his parole in time to return home, saving his sweetheart from the clutches of the villian.

The opera suggests the "Porgy and Bess" flavor, without the tragic import of that work. A number of the solos have decidedly melodious material, such as "O Re My Rose Forever" and "It's a Free Country."

The fiery aria "Don't Tread on Me" and the sly, scheming Bubba's "Take Your Choice" contain interesting possibilities for soloists.

The energetic Prof. Schwarz conducted from the piano, keeping his singers well in hand. Miss Dungee, with a clear, vibrant soprano and quite a flair for acting, proved very engaging.

* * *

WITH SOME of the harsh qualities smoothed out, Dorothy Davis' powerful contralto and very clear enunciation of every word will be an outstanding contribution.

Joseph Nettles handled his dramatic tenor well and acted the role with conviction. The villian, in the hands of Moore Carson (bass) almost stole the show.

Mr. Turpin, who was also dramatic coach for the production, did his usually excellent work, with the result that there were many professional touches to the entire production. The stage setting of Aunt Liz's kitchen, and the lighting effects were adequate and effective.

R. Hayes Strider, who provided the orchestration of the opera, plans to assist Prof. Schwarz in a New York presentation in the near future.

The Wednesday Assembly Series at Morgan State College closed its musical offerings this spring with two concerts — one by Hugo O'Meagher, Baltimore harpsichordist and another by Margaret Tynes, New York soprano.

At the first recital 'time went backward" several centuries, as one listened to the performance on the handsome, European, custom-made harpsichord, which the performer laughingly stated "cost as much as a Cadillac."

Hearing the harpsichord is an important experience for pianists and lovers of piano music. A vast amount of music now performed on the piano was written for the harpsichord, "father" of the modern pianoforte.

* * *

THE DIFFERENCE in the construction of the two instruments explains in part the use of scales, trills, runs and other types of musical decoration that one hears in the music of the Scarlatti, Bach, Mozart and others of the early classic period.

Mr. O'Meagher gave a masterly presentation of Bach's English Suite, depicting admirably the vivacious side of the great German composer.

The morning's program included also sonatas by two pupils of Scarlatti, one Padre (Father) Soler and one Padre Jose Gallen. One of the surprising delights of the lecture-concert was the playing of modern works adapted to the instrument and Mr. O'Meagher's own composition "Toccata," with its jazz influence.

* * *

CALENDAR June 1st at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Coppin State Teachers College, 2500 W. North Ave. first concert of a Student Series, including a miniature concert-opera based upon Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

June 8, the second concert of the series, with William Myers, tenor, as guest soloist.

HEARTWARMING: Performances are given by Elizabeth Taylor and Rock Hudson in the George Stevens production "Giant" which is now playing at the Met Theatre. James Dean stars as Jeff Rink to round out the exciting cast of the Edna Ferber novel adaptation. In Warner-Color, "Giant" is a Warner Bros. presentation.

"THE LITTLE HUT" NOW AT HARLEM

The noises you hear emanating from the Harlem Theatre these days are the roars of laughter from the customers viewing "The Little Hut," in which Ava Gardner, Stewart Granger and David Niven are starring in one of the funniest frolics ever filmed.

This witty and ultra-sophisticated spoof on the vagaries of love and the incredible ingenuity in which one man proposes to make off with another man's wife in a preposterously funny but strictly above-board "share the spoils" agreement, had them laughing on Broadway before being adapted to the screen by F. Hugh Herbert, who also produced the film with Mark Robson for M-G-M release.

* * *

HERBERT is the author of that previous memorable comedy gem, "The Moon Is Blue," and few are his equal in the realization of hilarious dialogue and rib-tickling situations.

TENSION-PACKED DRAMA OF THE OLD WEST

When a Western provides superb performances, realism, brilliant writing and direction, as well as the pure excitement in which it excels, it becomes a motion picture with universal appeal.

Such a film is Hal Wallis' epic production of "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral which is now playing at the Regent Theatre with Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas starred.

In two solid hours of brawling, tension - packed action, it presents a vivid, realistic study of two of the most colorful gunfighters the West ever produced, Wyatt Earp and Doc Holliday.

As different as night and day —Earp was a U.S. Marshal who fairly breathed law and justice and Holliday a well-educated but embittered gambler who hated the law — these two oil-and-water personalities teamed up to rid Tombstone of the murderous Clanton gang.

Around them producer Hal Wallis, director John Sturges and screenwriter Leon Uris have woven an action drama of great distinction poser and authenticity.

"GIANT" STARS ELIZABETH TAYLOR

"George Stevens' production, "Giant," is now playing at the Met Theatre. It stars Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and James Dean.

The film is an adaptation of the Edna Ferber best-seller "Giant," the tenth of the authoress' works to have reached the screen.

"Cimarron," "Show Boat," "Stage Door," and "Saratoga Trunk" were among the others. In WarnerColor, "Giant" was more than three years in production filmed on location at Virginia, Texas and California.

Elizabeth Taylor, often referred to as the most beautiful woman in the world, portrays Leslie Benedict, wife to Rock Hudson as Bick Benedict wealthy rancher of a vast empire of land. The popular actor previously won acclaim for his dramatic performance in "The Magnificent Obsession."

Shaw musical groups perform

RALEIGH, N.C. — The Shaw University Chorale Society, together with the Women's Choir, captivated their audience again Sunday, May 19, when Harry Gil-Smythe, professor of music and chairman of the department of fine arts presented both groups in concert.

Evangeline Forbes, soprano, senior of Raleigh; Reginald Burke, sophomore tenor from Edenton; Iris Hairston, freshman, Walnut Cove, Pedro Kornegay, freshman baritone of Mount Olive and Paul Crump, sophomore baritone from Jersey City, N. J., were soloists.

A gift of appreciation was presented to Mr. Gil-Smythe during intermission and remarks were made by Dr. William R. Strassner, president of Shaw University.

Hampton, Hilltoppers at shore

ASBURY PARK — The big Memorial Day weekend will bring two of the entertainment world's top attractions here to the famous Convention Hall on the Boardwalk.

Lionel Hampton and his international orchestra and revue will be featured Friday night, May 31.

The "king of the vibraharp," master of the drums, and his outfit fresh from a record-smashing Australian tour, have an entirely new repertoire for the initial shore appearance of the season.

The Hilltoppers, new tops in singing stars, will be here Saturday night, June 1, and Jimmy Sedlar's orchestra will play.

The amazing quartette, headed by Jimmy Sacca are no strangers to the Asbury Park dance spot, having appeared here for the past several seasons.

AVA GARDNER illustrates what the well-dressed woman will wear when castaway on a desert island. This is a shot of luscious Ava as she appears in M-G-M's "The Little Hut," now playing at the Harlem Theatre, in which she queens it over Stewart Granger and David Niven in a tropical paradise. She makes a pretty pastoral picture, doesn't she?
