The War Situation

This week has brought pleasant tidings from the battle fronts of Europe to Kent county people. We have seen Bulgaria lay down her arms and accept the terms of unconditional surrender; we have seen Serbia released from the tyrant's heel, as well as little Albania and Montenegro; Roumania, conquered and overrun by Austria, will no doubt be freed in short order; we will, in a few weeks, see Turkey, now nearly cut off from her allies, be willing to accept terms such as the allies imposed upon Bulgaria; then we will, perhaps, see Austria, for many months tottering, throw up her hands after a few months of invasion by our troops. But more important than any of these facts is the steady forward sweep of the allied armies in France and Belgium, wrenching territory that has been in German hands for years from the enemy. St. Quinten has been taken and Cambria and Lille will no doubt fall in a few days or hours, while the steady sweep of Foch's forces is sweeping the Germans from the coast. France will no doubt be evacuated by Germany in a few weeks, and the battle line will run through Belgium soil.

This all is good news, but does it show Germany defeated and ready to ask for peace? Not by any means, we fear. Take up your map of Europe, and see what it shows. It shows Russia overrun by Germany with half a dozen of her richest provinces in her hands; it shows all of Belgium and a considerably slice of France still in German possession; it shows that German territory is still uninvaded at any point.

Some think Germany will lay down her arms like Bulgaria and ask for peace on the terms of unconditional surrender. But we hardly think it possible. Germany has sinned too heavily against civilization to get an ordinary peace. This is no ordinary war Germany has waged against the world and Germany's rulers know defeat means annihiliation completely for the form of government which now clutches the German people by the throat. Hence they propose to fight it out to the end, and we look for a sanguinary struggle yet. SO BUY BONDS AND HELP EXPEL FROM THE WORLD FOREVER THE MOST MILITANT SPIRIT THAT EVER BROODED OVER A BATTLEFIELD.

Liberty Loan Workers Can Ride.—Last Sunday we noticed several liberty loan workers driving autos. These gentlemen were doing Liberty Loan work. The Fuel Administrator, at the request of Secretary McAdoo and the Liberty Loan Committee, has lifted the gasless Sunday ban on the use of automobiles so far as Liberty Loan work is concerned, and officially credited representatives of Liberty Loan work are authorized to use automobiles on Sunday during the Liberty Loan campaign when engaged in work in connection with this loan.
