Mother finds her missing cousins

A stranger to Baltimore and her two cousins were reunited on Monday through the efforts of Traveler's Aid and a story that appeared in Friday's AFRO.

The strange, Mrs. Martha Rogers, came to Baltimore from Newark seeking to find two cousins who formerly lived on Linden Ave.

However, the cousins had moved and she appealed to the AFRO for help in finding them. Her story appeared in Friday's AFRO.

Meantime, the Traveler's Aid had obtained a place for the mother and her two children to stay while it contacted her relatives in Arkansas.

On Monday, the Baltimore cousins showed up at Traveler's Aid and the reunion took place.

Miss Juanita Jones gives brilliant exhibition recital

By ADAH K. JENKINS

Last Thursday Junetta Jones gave her exhibition recital which marked the completion of three years holding of the Charles M. Eaton Memorial Voice Scholarship at Peabody.

Rousing applause from the audience attested to the superior accomplishments of this highly gifted young Baltimorean.

With her usual composed and modest demeanor, yet with a warm and gracious air, Miss Jones was most attractive in a becoming green formal gown.

She is blessed with vocal resources of unusually high quality. In addition, under the expert tutelage of Joseph V.Laderoute her natural gifts are being developed and not forced.

The program demonstrated the singer's progress in various fields of vocal music, from the classic Baroque of Handel and Mozart to the contemporary works by Barber, Giannini and Hadgeman. Proficiency in language was shown by songs in French, Italian and German.

* * *

MISS JONES has the vitality and brilliance in her voice that brings alive the elabroate figurations of Mozart's "Alleluia" and "Padre German." Her amazing flexibility and power were heard also in Handel's "In Praise of Harmony," where she was joined by Ronald Knudsen, violinist.

The soprano has a decided flair for operatic music and is growing in the ability to give herself to dramatic expression. "Depuis le Jour" (since the Day) from "Louise," one of the most famous of soprano arias, came thru splendidly, with the soloist receiving an ovation.

In the difficult "Dich Teure Halle" (This is the Hall) from "Tannhauser" her voice showed the powerful and opulent resources needed for Wagnerian music.

More precise enunciation would have made the English songs clearer, for Miss Jones is developing admirable ability to contrast the varying moods, which is so necessary in projecting modern songs.

LeRoy Evans at the piano gave the soloist authentic and highly musical accompaniments. Miss Jones is singing with the Peabody Orphestra at one of the final exhibition concerts on May 30 at Peabody.

* * *

PUPILS OF Helena Zurstadt were heard in the final recital of her annual series last Sunday afternoon in Sears auditorium.

The young people from elementary and intermediate levels performed with admirable skill, showing the result of expert guidance and instruction.

Their playing was clean-cut and precise without sacrificing zest and imagination. It was particularly noticeable that those students using the sustaining pedal did so with restraint and careful regard of the harmonic structure of the pieces.

Several of the more advanced pupils were very successful in compositions by contemporary writers. Miss Zurstadt, who is a former president of the Baltimore Music Teachers Association and is a present member of the executive board of the Maryland Music Teachers Association, has done considerable research and practical study on the presentation of modern music to piano students.

* * *

ALTHOUGH WE were disappointed at not hearing Carol Blanton Diggs, of Morgan faculty (she sustained a painful accident of her hand), Mr. Ryan, head of the Assembly Committee and Dr. R. H. Strider succeeded in securing at the last minute a worthy substitute in Ryslana Antonowicz.

She is a native of Poland and a graduate student at the Peabody here, where she is studying with Miecsyslaw Munz. Miss Antonowicz graduated from the Vienna State Academy and won high honors in several festivals abroad.

Her concert demonstrated a wide range of musical gifts and attainment. In show pieces, like Ravel's and Prokoviev's "Toccata," she was in assured command of the technical difficulties. There was definite poetic expression, the proper polish of the French work and the striking rhythms and dissonances of the more modern composition.

However, the real test of notable musicianship was in the Chopin "Ballad in F minor and the Schumann "Fantasiestucke" (Fantasy pieces). Miss Antonowicz achieved the poetic contrast between the soulful lyric passages and the brooding passion and intensity in the Chopin.

The Fantasy Pieces are a collection of shorter works full of rare intimacy that seems to translate "the poetry of everyday life" into music.

Among the ones that the pianist elected to play had such titles as "Warum" (Why?), "Des Abends" (The Evening) and "Grillen" (The Cricket). There were times when one felt that the broad humor and down-to-earth charm somewhat escaped the pianist.

The entire concert, however, was one of professional playing on a high level.

MAIL-BOX: From Volkwein Brothers Music Publishers, announcement of a composition "Pittsburgh," The Biography of a City, by the New York song writers and arrangers, Frank Metis and Randy Starr. It is scored for narrator and a mixed chorus, with piano accompaniment. Full orchestration is also available.

Services for the late Charlotte Bronte Robinson, for 32 years instructor of music at art at State Teachers College, Bowie, Maryland were held in the McKeldin Gymnasium of the school.

Miss Robinson was known throughout the state and nearby areas for her outstanding work with the music organizations of the school.

The veteran teacher, who was to have retired in nine days, died of a heart attack at Freedman's Hospital.

Dr. William E. Henry, president of the college, presided at the services, music for which was sung by the College Glee Club.

The Rev. Herman R. Curtis, pastor of Wrights AME Church, Elkton, delivered the sermon. Brief tributes were paid by Mrs. Gladys Bover, Mrs. Mary Law, Miss Edna M. Prout, Dean U.S. Young and Chauncey Miller.

The obituary was given by Alexander Wiseman, a former student of Miss Robinson. The services concluded with the singing of "Alma Mater," words and music of which were by the beloved teacher and musician.

Live Pinocchio show due at Royal Theatre

On Saturday morning, May 30, at 10 a.m., the children of Baltimore will be treated to a live production of the famous puppet play, "Pinocchio," presented by Anne Mercer on the stage of the Royal Theatre, 1329 Pennsylvania Ave.

A cast of 100 children, action singing and dancing, will tell the story of Pinocchio who became a donkey.

The leading character, pinocchio, will be portrayed by nine-year-old Leon Britain, who has been a student of dramatics and dancing with Miss Mercer since he was two and a half years old.

Pinocchio's father, Zeppetto, will be played by Charles Ashmore of School No. 104.

YVONNE BRITAIN will be the Blue Fairy who makes Pinocchio a real boy and Ralph Dawkins will play the part of Wick, the little mischievious boy who leads Pinocchio astray.

Some of the others appearing on the cast will be:

Charles Wright, Carmen Wiles, Carol Wiles, William Wright, Tony Fernandes, Brenda Thompson, Yvonne Kelly, Milton Hilery, Ernest Moore, Hebb, Robyn Taylor, Adrienne Michele Parrish, Dorothea Hebb, RoslynTaylor, Adrienne Taylor, Lloyd Johnson Jr., Joyce, Gregory Tillman, Retina Branch, Vanessa Watkins HowardPresberry, Lloyd Presberry, a squad of majorettes from the Cherry Hill Recreation Center and a drum corps from School 74.

JEAN GABIN gives confidence to radiantly beautiful Nicol Courcel when she takes the leading role in the drama of motherhood "The Case of Dr. Laurent" now at the Royal. It is recommended for adults and the second attraction stars Andy Griffith in "Onionhead."

On the Eastside

By CHARLOTTE W. DOWNIE

When neighbors of our Eastside and the Westside get together, a grand time can be had by all.

This was evident at the beautiful pastel tea given by the members of the Les Huit Mesdames Club.

The colorful affair was at the lovely Edmondson Ave. home of Mr. and Mrs. James Howard and was very colorful.

Streamers overhead gave the impression of a rainbow.

Club members added to the motif by wearing dresses of soft pastel shades and of the same design. The Table was decorated with delicious eatables and decorated with roses of varied color.

As a special attraction, Mrs. Sadie Milbourne and Charles Hinton of the House of Delta Rata, presented a hat show.

ALL NEIGHBORS on our Eastside are looking forward to seeing the exciting and colorful live production of "Pinocchio" to be given at the Royal Theatre on May 30.

Under the direction of Miss Anne Mercer, the cast of 100 children with their singing, dancing and acting will present a production such as all Baltimore have been waiting to see for a long time.

Pinocchio is being presented by the Fashion Academy and is a play in three acts. I urge all parents to take their children to witness this treat.

Minister's wife writes new hymn

By GERTRUDE M. PARKER

Congratulations to Mrs. Helen B. Stansbury of 2601 Huron St. who has written a Hymn called "The Omnipotence of God." It has been accepted by the copyright office in Washington.

Several months ago Mrs. Stansburg's husband, the Rev. Robert Stansbury wrote a hymn called "God's Paradise of Trees." Since then the Rev. Mr. Stansbury has suffered a stroke and is in ailing health. We are hoping him a speedy recovery.

The Recreation Center at School 154 held a dance contest conducted by Chuck Richardson, one disc jockey. Winners in the contest who received a radio and L.P. albums include Brenda Cole, Herbie Scott, May James.

The Teen Council of the Recreation was by the death of one of its members, Alethia Turner, who's funeral was held on Monday at First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Sarah Greenwood and Charles T. Parker 3rd are leaders of the center.

MRS. GRACIE WILKINSON of Bronx, N.Y. was the guest of Mrs. Edna Mae Johnson of 2619 Huron St. last week end.

The Rev. Mr. Dyson, district superintendent of the North Baltimore Dist. was the guest speaker at the 11 a.m. services at Mt. Winans Methodist Church on last Sunday. He was accompanied by his wife Mrs. Dyson.

Send a message of cheer to Howard Patterson of 2504 Puget St. who suffered a stroke on Monday. Mr. Patterson is owner of the barber shop which is headquarters for the AFRO AMERICAN's local sales and also leader in community activities. We are hoping for him a speedy recovery.
