The government requests us to conserve platinum tin from tin foil of every kind and pewter tin cans do not contain sufficient percentage of tin to be worth collecting. All these are used: peach stones, cherry seeds, plum pits, olive pits, apricot pits, prune pits, date seeds, walnut shells, hickory nut shells, Brazil nut shells, butternut shells, cocoanut shells. All these are used by the war department to burn into carbon which is used to manufacture gas masks for the soldiers. Seven pounds of nut shells make enough carbon for one gas mask. The government requires at present 500 tons of this raw material a day. Boy scouts, school children and others are urged to have nutting parties.
