KENT CELEBRATES VICTORY

Chestertown Celebrates Great Event In Joyous Manner—Other Facts About The Great War

Peace has come at last, after over four years of the bloodiest and cruelist warfare seen in the world's history. The armistice was signed on Sunday at midnight and hostilities have ceased.

When Bulgaria surrendered people who understood the situation said it was the beginning of the end. Shortly after, Turkey, cut off from her allies, did likewise. Austria, crushed by the Italians, capitulated soon after. This left Germany surrounded by her enemies. Sooner than have her armies crushed, her cities destroyed and her fields devastated, Germany, her dream of world dominion shattered, surrounded by her enemies, surrendered.

Shortly before the surrender the Kaiser—the greatest criminal in history—abdicated the throne and is now practically an exile in Holland—with the whole world clamoring for his arrest and trial.

The terms of the armistice make it impossible for Germany to renew the struggle again.

In Chestertown, shortly after the clock in the Lyceum tower had tolled off the hour of 8 a. m. the news came that Germany had signed the armistice during the night. Chestertown, that a few minutes before had been as "quiet as a church," and many of the people just arising from a night's repose, in a few minutes was wild with joy. All the bells of the town began to ring, the whistles to blow, while the fire alarms' sullen summons sent out a message of joy. And this time it was not a false alarm as on the preceding Thursday. Children draped in red, white and blue bunting, paraded the streets, blowing horns and making noises to denote their pleasure. Men, with sons on the firing line, with smiling faces, shook each others' hands, while here and there we saw a tear of joy course down the cheek of a mother whose son will come back to her—a hero as long as he lives.

Business was practically suspended for the day, while the people talked over the news. At night the celebration continued, the bells still pealing out, with guns and pistols adding to the noise. Autos bedecked with bunting came to Chestertown with parties and helped to enliven the occasion.

At night the biggest bonfire in recent years was held on the lot near the depot, where an effigy of the Kaiser, which had formerly been hung suspended from the telephone wires on High street, was burned.

And so the greatest war in history has come to a close—a war which has drenched the world in blood, broken up homes, ruined cities, caused untold apprehension and caused such misery as has not been witnessed since the dawn of time.

Extradition of former Emperor William of Germany from Holland and his trial in England on the charge of murder for which he has been indicted there, has been urged by James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany. Asking whether a man shall be allowed to escape who has "killed so many people that if they were laid on the ground they would form a line almost around the entire world," Mr. Gerard answered his own question with an emphatic "I should say not." "There is a treaty between Holland and England," Mr. Gerard said, "by which they can extradite the former Kaiser, who has been indicted in England, and try him before an English court. I guess we all know what the verdict would be. When the hangman drops the trap he will be doing away with one of the world's greatest murderers."

Armistice terms are not peace terms In the peace terms that are to come there will be set forth the complete reparation that must be made by the German people for the wrongs they have done to others and to the world and there will be provided punishment for the criminals responsible for those wrongs. What is set forth in the terms of armistice is a beginning in the right direction. When the good work is completed the world will be saved. Then can every lover of liberty say in all reverence, "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord!"

These figures of the great war show to what staggering extent it was carried. The war lasted 1567 days; the killed, wounded and missing of the entente Allies are estimated as 15,525,000 while the Central Powers lost 12,350,000 in the same way; The Entente Allies spent about $172,000,000,000, while the Central Powers spent about $77,000,000,000. Humanity, while staggered by the blow and the burden of debt, will benefit to the extent of the solid establishment, now or soon, all over the world, of the rule of the People.

Now that the war has ended and Germany and her allies crushed, the object of the victors will be to save the defeated nations from the chaos and rule of anarchy that sometimes follows the decline of great powers. President Wilson will, no doubt, be one of the leaders in this great movement to "make the whole whole world a decent place in which to live."

It looks like few, if any, more men will be inducted into the military service from Kent. A number of young men from Kent who were slated to go to camp on Wednesday were held up, and we have our doubts if any more will go. One Chestertown gentleman who has done good service to the government in helping Kent people fill out their questionnaires, stopped in the middle of a questionnaire when the order came to not fill out any more for the present.

SAVING WITHOUT SIGN POSTS TEST FOR HOUSEWIVES' WITS.

The United States has booked an order to supply 2,600,000 tons of meat and fats during the current year to be charged to the account of freedom.

It is a large order—a larger order than the undertaking to send ten million tons of breadstuffs.

In one way it comes to about the same thing as doubling the order for bread and sending half of it in the form of meat—for meats and fats are concentrated from feed. But that is not the biggest feature of it. It is this: When we send grain we use the entire crop, except enough for seed and a respectable reserve—there will be another harvest next year. But meat is different. All this meat must be sent—four times as much as we ever used to export and a million tons more than last year—and yet we ought to have at the end of the year flocks and herds as large as now—larger if we work it right.

The United States must so manage that its own people will be kept in health and strength; the victories of freedom also mean there are more friendly people to be nurtured and fostered. This large order the United States is to fill and yet be able to supply twice as many people another year and still keep its herds intact.

There will be no requisitioning, no swooping down on communities and driving all the cattle to the pen. The meats and fats will be supplied by volunteers. The food will be found by saving.

The overseas contract calls for 2,600,000 tons of meats and fats. Three times a day it is for every Marylander to declare whether, so far as he is concerned, Uncle Sam's contract is going to be fulfilled. It is not a sudden one day job and there are no little two-by-four sign posts to guide you. It is the biggest proposition that has ever been put up to the people of this State, it is a test not only of loyalty but of intelligence. It takes imagination to look at a crib of corn and realize that some day it may be a side of bacon going to France; it takes imagination to see in a stretch of green grass a tub of butter that is a whole lot more necessary overseas than at home. But to carry out the final food program and hand the knock out wallop to the Hun everybody has got to keep an eye on the whole nation's supply—present and future, food and fodder—and see that nothing goes to waste and everything is put to use. When the Food Administration issues its new Home Card there will be suggestions that will make the housewives new task of saving half as much again seem less Herculean than it sounds. Meanwhile anyone who is 100 per cent. American and 100 per cent. enterprising can make a big start by keeping the ancient maxim in mind, "Food will win the war; don't waste it."

Ice cream may be freely used as a desert in France, so long as it contains no sugar, no milk, no eggs and no flour.

MORE SUGAR ALLOWED. THREE LBS. A MONTH.

The amount of sugar allowed per month to each individual has been increased from two to three pounds. The whole monthly allowance can be bought for a family at one time. The amount allowed to public eating places is increased to three pounds for ninety meals.

This increase is made in fulfillment of the Food Administration's promise to set free extra sugar as soon as possible.

This increase is possible because of the very satisfying condition of the Louisiana crop and of Western refining, because railway freight space is more available while men, rather than munitions, etc., are being shipped to Europe and because the restrictions upon manufacturers and the self-denial of private consumers have built up a temporary reserve.

POTATO PYRAMIDS.

To one cup of well-seasoned mashed potatoes add one egg yolk. Beat until light. Take up by tablespoonfuls and form into pyramid shapes by pointing one end, and broadening the other as base to stand on. Set them on a greased tin, brush over with beaten egg, and when ready to serve, brown lightly in the oven. Mashed potatoes are more easily handled if shaped directly after a meal is over, while still slightly warm.

*Small cut of beef used.

Liver and Bacon have been separated by an order of the Food Courts, but the divorce proceedings, despite certain erroneous reports, have not been instituted between Ham and Eggs.

One hundred tons of material in the shape of fruit pits and nut shells for charcoal to be used in making gas masks for the United States Army has been collected by the Red Cross in New York City. This will supply approximately 28,562 gas masks.

CAN YOU WRITE A PLAY?

For the two best one-act plays submitted before December 1, and dealing with food conservation, prizes are offered of $100 or $50. The rules of the contest can be secured from the Food Conservation Play Committee, Drama League of America, Washington, D. C.

SPARE THE TURKEY AWHILE.

In the fall turkeys eat bugs and seeds, and then we eat the turkeys. The longer wait means the heavier weight. The Food Administration therefore suggests that the fowl be given a chance to fatten up with more good food and should not be marketed at a less dressed-weight than six pounds for hens and eight pounds for gobblers.

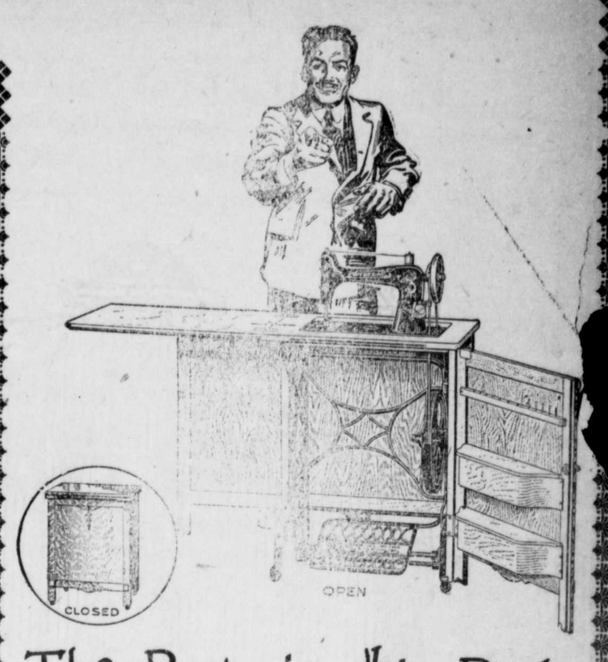

One year's food saving is an insurance premium against the next year's possible food shortage.
