False Alarm Causes 7 Deaths

NEW YORK — A fire if undetermined origin roared through a three-story Brooklyn tenement Friday night, killing seven children, while firemen were answering a false alarm turned in 32 blocks away.

A 20-year-old mother suffered multiple fractures when she jumped from a window to escape from the flames. Twi children whom she had thrown out of the window before she jumped escaped with minor injuries.

Ford Foundation grants funds for study of students

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — A Syracuse University study funded by $122,404 Ford Foundaton grant may reveal that black college students are develping the germ of an idea that could enrich the quality of campus life.

"The germ is the vital concern that black students have about developing a sense of community," said Prof. Charles V. Willie, director of the study and chairman of the sociology department at the University.

Willie, who is black, added: "Although actions to achieve this goal differ from the norm, in the long run they may be the forerunner of a new pattern of involvement."

* * *

The research project, already under way, is exploring how black students adapt in four types of predominantly white colleges in Central New York. By studying what bothers black students, researchers will be able to suggest ways to enrich the college experience and make it more relevant to blacks.

But Willie said their findings might be generalized to apply to the ways a larger number of students, black and white, adapt in college.

The one-year exploratory study began last fall. A preliminary report on the study will be ready in the fall of 1970. It will go to students who participated in the research, faculty and administrative personnel at the cooperating schools and the general public.

* * *

"This study is unique in its research strategy, because it is being made from the black student's point of view," Willie said. "We are interested in how the black student coms to terms with himself and the academic institution, rather than his adjustment to the educational enterprise."

The study involves approximately 400 black students, including about 200 at Syracuse University. No exact figures on total black student enrollment are available; 400 is an estimate made by black counselors and administrators at the schools.

The other three institutions will remain aninymous until the study is completed. The Ford Foundation described the four, including yracuse, a private university, as "private and public, four-year and two-yeSar, urban and rural, resident and non-resident."

Data for the study come from three sources: 1) interviews with students, faculty and administrators; 2) surveys of black and white students to determine concerns, attitudes and feelings and 3) a forum to monitor black experiences on campus.

The research team consists of two observers (one black and one white) assigned to each institution to conduct in-depth interviews with black students to explore student backgrounds, activities and social pressures. They also consult with faculty and administrators.

The assistant director of the research project is Dr. Arline F. Sakuma, assistant professor of sociology at S.U. John Dopyera, a doctoral candidate in psychology and director of the Head Start Evaluation Project at S.U., is research associate. Eight graduate students are helping with data collection.

Stokes sues agency for vote

CLEVELAND — A state agency that reviews and coordinates projects that use federal funds is being sued by Mayor Carl B. Stokes because it allegedly violates the one man-one vote principal.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court here last week states that the Nortreast Ohio Areawide Coordinating Agency denies the city of Cleveland fair representation.

The suit says the city represents 25 per cent of the population in the agency's area but has only 6 per cent of tre voting power, with the result that "citizens of the city of Cleveland are not being represented equally with citizens of other municipalities and counties."

The suit contends that city grants are being "determined by officials from communities who have nothing to do with programs of the city of Cleveland."

Votes Help Community Control

CLEVELAND — Lawyer Stanley Tolliver, speaking at a CORE forum last week, said black people must become registered voters if they wish to effect a new political system.

"We are living in a capitalistic society, not a democracy and we must control our neighborhoods," he said. "Control can be gained by voting and selecting people who are going to run for public offices."

Computer programming, and management at Morgan

A Computer Programming and Management Information Systems Course for business and economics majors at Morgan State College is being offered this spring semester with the assistance of the C. and P. Telephone Co. and Western Electric Co. Thirty-two students are enrolled.

The experimental course contains two weeks of introduction to information science and computer and programming; ten weeks of COBOL programming instruction and a couple of weeks of wrap-up on data communications and business information systems.

Coordinator is A. P Williams of C. and P.

Dr. Cleveland A. Chandler, chairman, Department of Economics and Business Administration, calls the new course, "A Model of cooperation between Morgan and industry in enriching the educational experience of our students

L. Mercer Smith, vice president and general manager of C. and P. Telephone Co., announced that some of the instructors and course material for the course are provided by his company. "If at the end of this semester, the College desires to continue the course, we would consider participating on a reduced basis during the 1970-71 school year."

But companies are in a "Cluster" Program with Morgan State whereby industry works closely with the college and makes available equipment, funds and programs.

The Western Electric Company will supply the instructor for the COBOL programming segment of the course.

The State College Computer Center facilities and the Morgan State remote terminal were used in the compiling of programs in conjunction with the course.

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A bill passed by the Kentucky House last week would make it imposible for citizens to file complaints about the behavior of police officers in Jefferson County. The Police Merit Board will retain the right to review disciplinary actions by the police chief, but will not do so upon a citizens request, but by its own initiative.
