Southern Commercial Congress To Meet In Baltimore Dec. 8-15

December 8-15 is to be a big time in Baltimore. The Southern Commercial Congress will meet there and some of the most prominent speakers of the country will be present.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels will have the Atlantic fleet mobilized in the Baltimore harbor Thursday, Dec. 12, and will send from 10,000 to 12,000 "jackies" to Baltimore to take part in a military and naval parade. He made this announcement in Washington this week to Mayor Preston, Col. C. L. Riggs, Dr. C. J. Owens, managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress, and John Temple Graves. Secretary Daniels promised to come to Baltimore for the event, which is to include a naval pageant in the harbor.

The Mayor, Colonel Riggs and Dr. Owens went to Washington as a committee to call on the Secretary of the Navy and other government officials to discuss the details of what is designed to be the greatest land and water demonstration in Baltimore in recent years. Mr. Graves joined them at the capital. General Carter, commandant at Camp Meade, promised last week to send from 12,000 to 15,000 soldiers from the cantonment for the street parade, the plans for which are in the hands of Colonel Riggs, in connection with the annual convention of the Southern Commercial Congress.

The feature of the congress will be the Allied War Exposition at Fifth Regiment Armory. This will be an interpretation of the part America has taken in the war and will review the national program in the scheme for national defense. The general theme of the congress will be "world commerce after the world war."
