"we're discussing courtesy, I have that confidence in you (to select an assistant), why don't you have that confidence in me?"

Based on the facts alone, he said, the assistants are qualified.

Chairman Kawacki responded, "It's not a lack of confidence, it's meagre information."

Despite Dr. Sheldon's warning that the assistants would not be paid, the commissioners hired the five students requesting Dr. Sheldon to pay them "upon reporting for duty" which means almost immediately. There was no clear explanation as to Dr. Sheldon's final action.

The meeting which was held at the E. 25th St. headquarters, began at 4 p.m. and adjourned at 10:45 p.m. The meeting room was crowded most of the time.

In other action, the board:

1. Approved Superintendent Sheldon's recommendation to suspend a Northern High teacher, Edgar Krout Jr., with full loss of pay effective Nov. 4, pending disposition of narcotics charges against him.

2. Approved the Superintendent's recommendation for submission of a supplemental budget and made certain budget reallocations.

3. Approved superintendent's recommendation for setting of Brehms Lane Elemenetary School addition contract.

4. Voted to advise City Council it was not in favor of Resolution No. 1542 which would involve schools in approving all permits for residential construction.

5. Voted to allow principals to have the option to attend the new In-Service Intergroup Educational Workshop, designed originally for teachers, after a plea for such representation was made by Stephen H. Sachs, representing the public school administrators.

And, afterwards approved a proposal that teachers, formerly compelled to attend such buzz sessions, may likewise now have the option to attend. The move to admit principals to these sessions was described by some board members as a "death knell" to an imaginative new program prepared by a committee of 38 which had worked all summer.

6. Heard from six citizens including John J. Iago who described proposed assistants to commissioners as "radicals"; fred Mias Amy Zierler, Western High president, requesting that the ban on Sam Cornier the teacher-poet, be lifted. She alleged he had been banned from teaching in city schools. (Both the board and Sheldon promised to investigate this.)

Also, heard from Mrs. Mary Rosemond, representing League of Women Voters, expressing concerns over proposals to arm security giards and promised to include her suggestions pass her suggestions on to the committees now studying same.

8. Heard from Miss Shirley Hartwell and Miss Anna Brown, Western High English teachers, requesting permission to speed up purchase of relevant textbooks. They were promised board members would work with the administration to eliminate the present two-year span between order and receipt.

7. Approved Superintendent Sheldon's personnel recommendations including William Jennings to field coordinator, Community Schools; Earl Jones, evaluator in Research Division; Mrs. Doris Williams to special assistant Ben Franklin Junior High.

The next board meeting is Nov. 19, 8 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Record high of 18 will sit in Assembly

By MAX JOHNSON

When Maryland's newly elected General Assembly convenes at Annapolis in January, there will be a new high of 18 black members in its body, an increase of seven over the 11 in the outgoing State Legislatuer.

Significantly, the increases all came in Baltimore City during the past general election.

There will be two new senators to hike to four the number in that 43-member body.

There will be five new House of Delegates members to increased from 11 to 14 the number of those who will be serving in that 142-member body.

All of the incumbent black Assembly members were returned to office Tuesday.

In attition, historic breakthroughs were recorded in the city's 2nd and 5th Legislative Districts.

The 2nd saw the election for the first time of a black state senator among its two, and an increase from two to three to a new high of black House members-elect among its eight seats alloted.

The 5th final results brought for the first time black Assembly members-elect to represent that district, with a senator among its two and two House has members among its seven seats alloted.

East Baltimore's 2nd District since the 1966 elections has has had a majority of black citizens with a rapid withdrawl of whites from wrat was formerly known as the Bohemian stronghold.

In that 1966 gubernatorial election, the district elected fos the first time two black House members, and in the 1967 municipal elections its initial black city councilman.

Northwest Baltimore's last bastion of the Jewish community in the city has witnessed a rapid change in the fac. face of its population during the past decade.

For the past elections, approximately 45 per cent or more of its citizens are now black, and a majority of these are homeowners in one of the city's better residential areas — that is upper protions of the district.

Initial black State Legislature represent ion was inevitable in the past election.

Here are the black members-elect of Maryland's new General Assembly, all Democrats, with the incumbents noted by this asterick (*) besides names:

BALTIMORE CITY
2nd DISTRICT — SENATE, Robert L. Dalton, civic leader and veteran steelworker.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES — Floyd B. Adams (), Joseph A. Chester (), John W. Douglass, businessman and consulting industrial analyst to the Baltimore City Planning Department.

4th DISTRICT — SENATE, Mrs. Verda F. Welcome (), come (), Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd (), — Isiah Dixon Jr. (), Mrs. Lena K. Lee (), Troy Bralley (), Calvin A. Douglass (), Lloyal Randolph (), Frank M. Conway, insurance executive; Miss Hildagardeis Boswell, supervisor Community Relations Division, Maryland Human Relations commission.

8th DISTRICT — SENATE, Clarence W. Blount, principal Dunbar High School, chairman Baltimore Community Action Agency.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES — Walter R. Dean Jr., assistant professor Urban Affairs, Community College of Baltimore; Kenneth L. Webster, administrative assistant, Baltimore Housing and Community Development Agency.

Members over-ride Sheldon on districts, hiring aides

By PAUL EVANS...

The black majority on the Baltimore School Board rejected at a lengthy and explosive meeting last night, the school plan for decentralization presented by School Superintendent Dr. Thomas D. Sheldon, which has been nine months in preparation.

In a speedy vote, which followed an hour of debate by members, the black members — Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss, Larry S. Gibson, Samuel Daniels, and James Griffin — voted to kill the plan because they felt that the same old patterns of racial segregation were still inherent in the Sheldon plan.

Thus the vote was 4-3 with Mrs. Maree Farring, John Sweeney and Nicholas Mangione, the newest board member, voting against killing the proposal. The other board member Philip Macht, who usually votes with the four blacks, abstained.

The political nature and racial tone of the entire procedure was displayed as Mr. Mangione told board members after the vote was taken that "In two months we'll get this plan anyway, whether it passes tonight or not."

He referred to the impending resignation of Philip Macht who resignes this year, it is rumored that he will a Mayor D'Alesandro not to reappoint him to the position.

Mr. Macht has been able to assist the black members with his vote, permitting a more liberal trend to prevail over the board's decisions. The vote of the black members and Mr. Macht's has usually scored a 5-3 decision on most school decisions.

Moreover, the meeting last night was filled with personality assassinations as Mr. Mangione addressed two black male members as "you boys" and turned to Mrs. Moss and addressed her as "Mrs. Boys," when he was told of the uncomfortable history of the expression.

Main provisions of the Sheldon proposal included: "the creation of nine administrative districts for nine sets of schools in the city, six of these districts encompassing the regular elementary schools and three for all comprehensive secondary schools.

"Each of these administrative districts, headed by an individual director, would serve approximately 17,000 to 20,000 pupils who will continue to enroll in schools under the School Board enrollment policy, not according to the geographical areas in which they live.

"The concept would place decision-making authority in the offices of the district directors, special area directors and special area superintendents and would locate offices of the nine district directors within the community area of their responsibility.

"Each district director would be responsible for the educational needs of all pupils attending schools in his district."

Specific duties of the area directors would have been "to serve as the educational leader for specific numbers of schools."

In debates before the Sheldon Plan was defeated, Samuel Daniels asked Dr. Sheldon whether individual administrators throughout the city's schools had been contacted. Dr. Sheldon said that he had had breakfast recently with the city's principals and they were aware of the proposals.

Mr. Daniels noted that in one secondary area in Dr. Sheldon's plan a ratio of 15,000 non-whites to 3,000 whites existed, and he felt this was unacceptable as a means of increasing racial integration.

Board members opposing the plan also pointed out that there was not one district office located in what they considered the "inner city."

The nearest district superintendent's office, according to the Sheldon Plan, was located at the James Mosher School located on Wheeler Ave. "That," said Daniels, "is not what many of us consider the 'inner city'."

Mr. Gibson noted that in the Sheldon plan there were 38 schools with no racial balance, having 100 or less black students in the schools.

Mrs. Moss pointed out that while the School Board and Dr. Sheldon could not come up with an equitable system then, perhaps an equal opportunity specialist could assist in drawing up a new plan.

Dr. Sheldon retorted, "I think we will research this project to death." Mr. Sweeney noted that although he agreed personally with the philosophy of integration that many "black politicians and leaders" were calling for racial separation when black members were preparing to vote against the proposal.

Disparities in racial numbers were pointed out by several black commissioners on figures presented them by Dr. Sheldon.

In district "A" of the Elementary Division, there are 9 schools with an all-white population and one school with an all-black population. In District "B" of the Elementary Division there are 11 schools with an all-black population with the other 11 schools in the District with little or token racial integration.

In District "D" there were 14 schools with an all black population with second racial integration in the other 10 schools. District "E" comprising some 24 schools had a relatively good racial balance while the remaining district in the elementary division. District "F" had 19 schools being all black with the remaining 7 schools with scant racial integration.

There was no decision after the vote killing the proposal as to whether a new plan would be submitted in the immediate future.

In other business, the Board decided to hire the five School Board assistants from Antioch College over the recommendation of Dr. Sheldon and Board President Robert Kawacki to delay naming the aides until more could be learned of the students' background.

The matter of school board assistants has been one of controversy for some time. Members of the board who are considered not as liberal as the other members, have repeatedly stated that they do not wish to have an assistant, while the liberals want one.

Mr. Mangione insisted, for almost an hour that the students being considered were "radicals". He confirmed" his supposition, in his words, by stating that one student had attended a student conference "for radical change."

After lenghty discussions of the matter, Dr. Sheldon told the commissioners that he would not recommend the students to be paid, if hired, until they had been cleared through "regular" personnel channels.

This statement brought on a discussion of what were the "regular" channels. Commissioners Gibson, Moss, Daniels, Macht and Griffin told Mr. Kawacki trat in hiring an assistant for him that the board had given him his way without asking about the personal background of the person.

Mrs. Moss told Mr. Kawacki that his not approving of the students selected by the Commissioners as their assistants was racial. She said, "You have no faith in the ability of black people to hire people on their own.

"This has been racial from the start. Each time we have come before you with this matter, you have found an excuse to delay the issue, even though we have been discussing the matter since the early Spring."

Mr. Kawacki denied that the matter was racial. He said that he was afraid of having students enter the public schools with a "badge of authority" without having probed into their backgrounds deeply enough.

Defense witnesses told the jury that police used excessive force as they [illegible] Flower Mart patrons with horses.

Among them was Assistant States Attorney Anton J. Keating who told the jury while he was present at the Mart he was afraid for his own safety as police rushed upon the crowd.

Photographs taken by a newspaper on the scene were shown the jury and pictured mounted policemen with night sticks driving back the crowd. One picture showed a horse on the sidewalk.

The photographer testified he saw Mr. Hallengren at the Mart but noted no disorderly conduct although other persons were objecting and saying the police had no right to use such force against patrons.

Mr. Hallengren denied he was at the Flower Mart at the time police said he caused disturbance.

four black attorneys, William Nelson, William Carruth, Thomas Hicks and Paul Smith.

Judge Foster told the AFRO on Tuesday that the City Council has not as yet appropriated money for the four new posts and there is no space in the courthouse for them to hold court hearings.

However, he added, make-shift space can be found when the jobs become a reality.

Need for more Juvenile Court jurists has been evident for more than a year due to increase of youngsters involved in criminal offenses.

However, the appointment of more masters became urgent late this summer when Baltimore was required to move the juvenile age limit up from 16 to under 18."

The backlog of pending cases is now estimated to be more than 3,000. Among them are many young people lodged in juvenile detention centers. Others awaiting hearings are in custody of their parents.

High on the list of young offenders are those involved in narcotics traffic, shoplifting, thefts and robberies ranging from armed holdups to petty larceny and assault with intent to murder.
