YOUNG LOVE IS symbolized by Paul Anka and Gigi Perreau in this scene from Allied Artists "Look In Any Window," in which Anka is starred with Ruth Roman. The picture is now at the New Albert Theatre.

THIS IS PART of the breathtaking action of "Gorgo," King Brothers production for Metro Goldwyn - Mayer, not playing at the Harlem. Bill Travers, William Sylvester and young Vincent Winter star in the thrill - drama, filmed in Auto motion and color.

WINCHESTER CONCERT — The fresh young voices of The Profiles will be heard in tonight's (Friday) program at Winchester Armory. All Baltimoreans, they are from left: Melvin Wilson, Ollie Mae Jackson, Harry Patterson, Billie Jo Weaver and John Jackson. An Eastern Shore tour for them is in the making.

MARTIN - MacLAINE ON AT REGENT

Dean Martin and Shirley MacLaine, who were last seen opposite each other in the Hal Wallis dramatic production, "Career," are starred in the producer's farce comedy, "All in a Night's Work," a Paramount release in Technicolor, now at the Regent Theatre.

The story of "All in a Night's Work" concerns the events that occur within a huge New York publishing company when its founder is discovered dead with a strange smile on his face.

Suspicion as to what put it there points to a mystery girl who was seen, clad only in a towel, racing out of his Palm Beach hotel suite at three o'clock in the morning.

To forestall a public scandal which would topple the teetering company, the girl must be found and her silence bought.

Martin is cast as the playboy nephew who inherits the company and falls in love with Shirley, the "mystery girl," employed by the magazine as a researcher.

Co-starred are Cliff Robertson, Charlie Ruggles and Broadway's Norma Crane making her film debut. Jerome Cowan, Gale Gordon and Jack Weston have top roles. Joseph Anthony directed.

PAUL ANKA IN FILM AT ALBERT

The multi - faceted talents of Hollywood's younger generation, particularly those of Paul Anka and Gigi Perreau, set the tone for "Look in Any Window," fast moving drama, which is now at the New Albert Theatre.

Opening the picture with the sensational young singing star Paul Anka singing the title song over the credits, director William Alland sets a pace that doesn't let up until the picture comes to its breath - taking climax.

The story, briefly, concerns the ever growing tendency on the part of suburban residents to spend too much time and energy seeing to their own fun and not giving enough attention to their children, who, as a result of watching their parents, no longer know what is right and wrong.

Produced by William Alland in association with Laurence E. Mascott, who also wrote the script, "Look in Any Window" is extremely well done and many viewers will wonder if they have been spied upon in their most unguarded moments.

THRILLING 'GORGO' NOW AT HARLEM

Monsters always have had an amazing appeal for motion picture audiences. Although they have taken varied forms and different dramatic devices, many have been box-office bonanzas and several have achieved recognition as screen classics.

Latest entry in this popular category is Metro - Goldwyn-Mayer's "Gorgo," a King Brothers production, now playing at the Harlem, and to make the obvious pun, it's a "king-size" picture with some startling innovations for monster films.

For example, there are two monsters. One, who plays the little role, is a baby 15 feet long. The other, Gorgo's mother, checks in at 250 feet.

Played against the spine-tingling and spectacular destruction of modern London is probably the strangest love story ever screened, the love of this monster mother for her child.

In fact, she is so determined to rescue her captured baby that she fights a modern warship, ignores machine guns, flame throwers and missiles, and spreads a trail of terror through the city, toppling the Tower Bridge, Big Ben, Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament.

The human stars of "Gorgo" are Bill Travers, William Sylvester and young Academy Award - winner Vincent Winter. There are some 10,000 players in this picture, which was filmed in Automotion and color off the coast of Ireland and on the streets of London.

School No. 60 PTA hears Mrs. Phillips

The PTA of Gwynns Falls Elementary School No. 60 had as guest speaker, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Phillips, a member of the School Board.

The Wednesday evening meeting attracted over 250 parents who heard Mrs. Phillips compliment them for taking time to come to school to find out how your children are doing, consulting with their teachers and learning how you can help them at home."

She noted her own experience of eliminating television in the home during weekdays as an important aid in getting homework done, and in enabling the family group to get to know each other better.

EARL KOGER Jr., PTA president, presided. He announced help was needed to establish a Boy Scout troop. He also told of the importance of using the nearby Enoch Pratt library branch, and urged members to make nomination for new officers, as many of the present officers have children entering new schools in the fall.

Franklin Williams, PTA vice president, introduced Mrs. Phillips. Hyman B. Kaminkow, principal, endorsed the PTA program of collecting discarded clothing for needy families and urged support of the drive.

Paul Edward Hunter Jr., president; and Derrick Lee Ames, vice president of the student Council, led the flag raising, and presented flowers to the speaker. Mrs. Margaret W. Ewing is vice principal of the school.

TONY INVEIGLES KATIE to his apartment, determined to make a deal with her in "All in A Night Work" not at the Regent Theatre.
