Grange Notes

Still Pond has set the pace! A few weeks ago, in talking over new members, two of the "old ones" got together, and the result is that by their efforts 16 new members were taken in on Saturday, March 1. Sixteen as the direct result of feeling that, individually, we are responsible for the success or failure of the order.

We had three guests also present with us, in time for our good supper and the good singing which followed—Dr Clarke and Mr. Wm. G. Smyth and wife. The meeting was an educational meeting throughout, and all were greatly benefitted by the talks given. Dr. Hepbron spoke on the "Back-to-the-School" movement. Dr. Clarke on "After the War Conditions" in the schools, and Mr. Wm. G. Smyth on the "School as a Community Center." Many radical changes were spoken of, which we all hope to see accomplished.

On Saturday, March 8, the meeting will be promptly at 2.30, and during the lecture hour the Grangers will be introduced to some calories, which art guaranteed not to bite. And then they're going to sing! So now you know who's talking!

Old Coins Found.—Mr. Arthur Johnson, who has been tearing down the old residence on the farm of Mr. Marion Malcomb, in Morgnec, which will be replaced by a new one by Contractor A. M. Culp, of Chestertown, found three of the oldest coins we have ever seen. One was a copper piece about the size of a quarter. The face and back were completely effaced, but upon the edge of it was cut "one hundred dollars." This piece of money was probably in use long before the recollection of anyone now living. Another coin found looked like an old English pence, but was so old that the marks upon it were not distinguishable. The other coin was a regular U. S. penny, which came from the mint in 1801, making it 118 years old. It looked almost new.

High Street, Chestertown.—High street, Chestertown, is the widest and best business street on the shore. In fact, we doubt if there is a town anywhere in Maryland that has a street that can compare with it. Where can you find a macadamized street, wide enough for three or four autos to stand anywhere in the state, outside of Baltimore City? This street, running from Brooks Mill to the Chester, is about a mile long and is lined with as pretty homes and business places as you will find anywhere. High St., Chestertown, is to Chestertown what Broadway is to New York and what Broad street is to Philadelphia, reaching from one end of the town to the other, into which all streets run—the main artery of the town's business life.

In Memoriam

In sad, but loving remembrance of our dear one, Harry Alday Schelts, who departed this life three months ago today, March 5, 1919.

Out in the silent grave yard,
'Neath the sod and dew—
Never a moment forgotten,
In silence I think of you.

There is one who still will linger
At the spot where you are laid,
Who still comes and scatters flowers
On the grave that Christ hath made.

You are not dead to me, dear friend,
But as a star unseen,
I feel that you are near me—
Though death intrudes between.

Oh, joys that are gone, never to return,
To cheer my aching heart,
And, oh, the saddest thing there is,
When loved ones have to part.

BY A FRIEND.

Fine Poem By Prof. Melvin

To The Editors

The poem appended was written by Prof. Milton Melvin for the perusal of a few near friends only. But the friends of Prof. Melvin, who for forty years was engaged in educational work in Kent, are very many, and I take the liberty to send it to the press.

ONE OF HIS FRIENDS.

The poem is as follows:

A RESPITE

Don't tell me of my failures now:
I'm weary, and would fain forget;
Sometime, when I have stronger grown,
Then you may tell me, but not yet;
For, I'm depressed as by defeat,
My life seems naught, my strivings vain;
Perhaps, when weariness is gone,
I may take heart again.

Don't tell me of achievements great,
For, by comparing, mine seem small;
But, I seemed called to little things,
I heeded, did my best in all:
I put away my youthful dreams,
For others labored day by day,
I smoothed the pathway for their feet,
And cleared the briers from their way.

O friend, if I have burdens lightened,
If any faces I have brightened,
If caused the faint to try once more,
Then tell me this, and tell it o'er.
'Tis not enough to have done well,
To think I have, or even know:
I need a friend's assuring word,
I need a friend to tell me so.

O friend, when one is old and worn,
When hair is gray and strength is shorn,
When little efforts, made each day,
Show manhood's vigor passed away;—
With brush of love paint for his view
Scenes from his life, the bright, the true;
The darker scenes, strewn through the years,
Already dimmed by contrite tears,—
From touching these with light, refrain,
And let them in the shade remain:
But scenes where he o'ercame the wrong;
Where to the sad he gave a song;
Where to the needy succor gave,
By gift, by action prompt and brave;
Where mercy showed, wrongs were forgiven,
E'en as he would receive from heaven;—
With light of truth to paint these try,
That they may meet his age-dimmed eye,
That, feasting on these memory gleams,
His days may close in happy dreams.

America Realizes the Need

Daily the realization of the awful condition of the millions of Armenian war victims is being brought home sharper to the people of this country. An indication of this is the ready response to the appeals for aid and the spirit of co-operation being manifested by the heads of the various important departments of the national government. Beginning with President Wilson, who has made two strong appeals for aid, federal officials down the line are showing a keen sympathy and appreciation of the desperate situation and the crying needs of these people. The War and Navy Departments and the Shipping Board especially are manifesting a strong spirit of co-operation with the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, whose members are working with all their energies to keep alive four million people in the Near East through the winter. These millions, whose friends and relatives were tortured and slaughtered, and who in many cases were tortured themselves and finally deported from their homes because of their sympathies for the cause of the Allies and their refusals to abandon their own faiths in favor of the Mohammedan religion. The interest of the Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, was again indicated last Monday in the following telegram he sent the committee: "The need of the peoples whom your committee is striving to serve and save is so grievous and appealing that the War Department desires to do everything within its power to co-operate in relieving their condition."

The counties of Maryland are responding nobly to the appeal to Maryland to do her share in this great relief work. Every indication is that the rural sections of the state will pass their quota and thus will be the means of saving additional lives among these millions of virtims, 400,000 of whom are orphaned children.

Though only 17 of the 23 counties of Maryland had made returns to State Director J. W. Mace up to March 3, the counties' total hai then reached $50,300.

All the counties that have reported have done splendidly and the others not yet ready promise to also do their share. Following are the returns as announced by Chairman Mace on Mar. 3: Alleghany $5,200; Anne Arundel $3,200; Baltimore County $1,000; Carroll $2,000; Cecil $500; Frederick $3,000; Garret $7,000; Harford $6,000; Howard $2,000; Montgomery $1,500; Prince Georges $3,000; Queen Annes $1,500; Somerset $1,000; Washington $8,200; Wicomico $4,000; Worcester $1,200.

QUICK AND ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION

THAT Nash Trucks deliver their loads punctually when weather and road conditions are bad is said by owners to be largely attributable to the fact that the trucks are equipped with automatic locking differentials.

Proof of the dependability of Nash trucks is the fact that they are hauling the loads of such concerns as: Morris & Company; The Palmolive Company; The Boston Store, of Chicago; The American Steel Foundries; The Standard Oil Company, and others.

Similar Cases Being Published In Each Issue

The following case is but one of many occurring daily in Chestertown. It is an easy matter to verify it. You cannot ask for better proof.

Enoch Latham, shoemaker, High St., Chestertown, says: "Whenever I caught cold, it seemed to settle on my kidneys and I suffered untold pain. When I straightened up it seemed as though I were stabbed. My kidneys acted too frequently and I had to get up several times at night to pass the kidney secretions. I had dizzy spells and on different occasions my eyes gave me trouble, a mist seemed before them. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. I purchased them from M. A. Toulson's Drug Store and they gave me great relief."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Latham had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgrs., Buffalo, N. Y.
