Forte's lawyer accused by Government of lying

WASHINGTON

James Laughlin, prominent white attorney, who was charged with perjury connected with his involvement with well-known client, heard the government Thursday accuse him of having lied to a grand jury.

The charge resulted from the jury's investigation of allegations stemming from his client's case.

Joseph Lowther, Assistant U.S. Attorney made the charge in his opening statement before the jury in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge Luther Youngdahl.

The prosecutor declined to elaborate on the reason Laughlin allegedly lied to the grand jury, asserting that the motive would become clear as the government presented its case.

Laughlin, who is defending himself, assisted by another attorney, reserved his opening statement.

Lowther's brief argument was the first testimony heard by the jury though the trial was scheduled to go into its fourth day today (Friday).

Since Tuesday, the selection of the jury and testimony on whether tapes to be offered by the government are admissable as evidence, have delayed the proceedings.

DR. ALLAN U. FORTE, Baltimore physical therapist, who was cleared of a charge of abortion, last year, may be called as a witness on behalf of Laughlin, who represented Forte at his own trial.

It was a grand jury investigation of allegations made during Forte's trial that led to the placing of charges against Laughlin.

The attorney is accused of falsely telling a grand jury investigating Forte's trial that he (Laughlin) had never talked to a former Baltimore policewoman, Mrs. Bernice Gross.

Mrs. Gross, who has been named as a co - conspirator in a related case, is not charged as a defendant.

THE GOVERNMENT Tuesday, offered testimony on a motion outside the hearing of the jury, that telephone conversations between Mrs. Gross, cooperating with the Government, and Laughlin, had been recorded.

According to testimony, Mrs. Gross was in the office of U.S. Attorney David C. Acheson at the time she dialed Laughlin's telephone number and talked to him.

The grand jury investigation of several persons and the nature of their associations with Forte was undertaken after Forte accused a policeman, who testified against him at his trial of having attempted to bribe him. The policeman offered to drop the case for a specified sum, Forte contended.

• • •

LAUGHLIN testified before the grand jury, a secret hearing, following Forte's trial, concerning information he (Laughlin) allegedly had concerning the alleged bribe the policeman offered his client.

Subsequently, the grand jury indicted Laughlin on the charge of perjury. He was also named in a companion indictment of conspiring to influence the testimony of the woman who testified against Forte at the February trial.

Forte is also a defendant in the conspiracy case in which Mrs. Gross is listed as co - conspirator but not defendant.

IN ADDITION, Forte has been accused of preforming another operation on a woman whose testimony led to the conviction, last week, of still another defendant, Mrs. Joyce Johnson, who was charged separately with bribing the woman on behalf of Dr. Forte.

In the case on trial, the Government alleges that Laughlen spoke to Mrs. Gross more than 24 times between Oct., 1962 and March, 1963.

The trial is before U.S. District Court Judge Luther W. Youngdahl, who in an unusual action, ordered that the jury be impounded for the entirety of the trial expected to last up to two weeks.

Mr. Newell says he's 'cautious'

Why won't Frank Newell III, Baltimore County state attorney, let the mass civil rights demonstrations that succeeded in desegregating Gwynn Oak amusement park's last summer rest in peace?

In reaching a settlement, County Executive Spiro T. Agnew said he was agreeable to the point that trespassing charges against the demonstrators be dropped.

The Price Brothers, owners of the park, said they would not press charges.

The park is now integrated.

MR. NEWELL is the only public figure concerned who seems unwilling to let the Gwynn Oak affair die a natural death.

He is still carrying the cases and thus far has given no indication that he will advise the grand jury to drop charges.

Under orders from city officials, who are in turn being pressured by merchants, police swooped down on children on picket line at school, adults in the downtown area and ran the total of arrests to more than 1,600.

The Rev. Mr. Ulmer was charged with failing to obey a siren. Mrs. Ulmer and Jettie were accused of interfering with police, and Virginia was charged with resisting arrest.

All except Mr. Ulmer were being held in quarantine.

Race seen behind row on schools

By RALPH MATTHEWS JR.

No one will say so publicly but at the bottom of the recent small war between certain City Councilmen and the School Board is the racial issue.

Race and race alone is the underlying reason why some legislators have backed resolutions in the Council aimed at stripping the School Board of its control of Department of Education spending.

The maneuvers, if successful, would see politicians deciding what new schools would be built, where they would be built and how much would be spent for said schools.

Some councilmen were under pressure from white voters in their districts who resented the school board's plans to rezone the school attendance lines to fill all colored pupils in schools traditionally white.

These pupils were bussed from overcrowded schools of inner city to less crowded schools further out in the city because the School Board decided this year to finally do something to relieve part-time classes in public schools.

DISCRIMINATION CHARGED — Here at 203 Davis St. is a restaurant and tavern that has been picketed this week by members of the National Alliance of Postal Employees. They charge that colored persons are denied service. The establishment is located some 50 yards from the Main Post Office, part of which can be seen to the right in the picture. Mayor McKeldin, after an investigation, said the place derives more than 50 per cent of its trade from alcoholic beverages, hence does not come under the Public Accommodations Law. The postal men complain that white letter carriers and supervisors patronize the place. They have also called for a stronger public accommodations law.

'Ghost Town' left in wake of another BURHA project

By MAX JOHNSON

There is a ghost community fast being created in the heart of a famed, old Northwest Baltimore residential sector, in the area between McCulloh St. and Park Ave. below North.

It is a community of demolished homes and deserted businesses, from which many of the remaining residents are still fleeing.

Specifically, it is the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency's Madison-South project for its Mount Royal-Fremont Urban Renewal Area.

Its boundaries are Laurens St. north; Park Ave. and Bolton St. east; Dolphin St. south, and McCulloh St. on the west.

BURHA is in the midst of a new freshaping program for this 93-acre tract.

• • •

THE AREA is to have new housing for approximately 1,000 families in the middle income and upper brackets.

To accomplish this, BURHA is in the process of demolishing the homes of 1,650 families, many of whom are not up to middle income bracket as termed by the agency's standards.

A fire house is nearing completion at the northwest corner of McCulloh and Mechanic Sts. Immediately north, between McCulloh and Eutaw Pl., a school and playground are to be built.

Small parks and many open spaces are designed for the area.

Much of this, however, is some distance in the future, according to BURHA spokes-

Tragic accident leads to probe

"Places like this overcrowded and illegally operated day nursery came into existence because the city and state refuse to appropriate the necessary funds to aid legitimate ones."

Mrs. Ann Miller, of the Health Department, made this statement Tuesday at the site of a Northwest Baltimore day nursery where a tragic accident led to disclosure the operator had no license.

Mrs. Miller, in an interview with the AFRO at the Peter Pan Nursery, 2900 block Allendale Rd., said:

"There is not one nursery in the entire state of Maryland, receiving a single penny from the state for aid in its maintenance and operation."

• • •

POINTING OUT that other states such as New York and California have set up funds to aid nursery schools for the children of working parents in middle and lower income brackets, Mrs. Miller said she felt that Baltimore should also adopt a similar program.

"I must admit," said Mrs. Miller, "that although the conditions were violated fire department and city health department regulations, the children appeared to be very happy."

• • •

THE ACCIDENT occurred at about 9 a.m. Tuesday, in the basement of the nursery, police said.

They reported that a four-year-old girl, Denise Gibson, 2809 block Ulman Ave., received second and third degree burns of 70 percent of her body, when she attempted to reach a TV set by crawling onto a gas range.

According to report of the incident, the girl's dress caught fire and she panicked.

The owner-director of the nursery, Mrs. Virginia R. Elliott, said her daughter Miss Joyce G. Sharp, 19, took the child to Lutheran Hospital after extinguishing the flames.

She was admitted in critical condition. Hospital authorities said later that the girl's condition had not changed.

• • •

POLICE SAID they discovered the illegal operation of the nursery upon investigating the accident.

Miss Sharp, police stated, had identified herself at the hospital as the child's mother, Mrs. Ada Gibson, but they reported upon arriving at the Allendale Rd. address she had given, they discovered the house was being operated as a day nursery.

Officers Dennis Roach and Daniel Lewis, of the Northwestern District, stated that they counted more than 50 children on the premises.

The officers said the house was in disorder and the children were not properly supervised.

Upon learning that Miss Sharp was not the child's mother, police placed her under arrest and charged her with giving a false report.

MRS. ELLIOTT was ordered to close the nursery immediately by Dr. Robert

How not to win friends

By WILBUR L. PINDER JR.

The Central District desk sergeant looked at the woman who had been waiting to address him, then suddenly yelled:

"Get the h . . . out of the way, can't you see that there are prisoners here! If one of them turned around and hit you, you'd go screaming all over the d . . . place."

These words were unexpected by the timid woman, who had approached the sergeant to make a simple inquiry.

His rebuke and use of profanity nearly brought the woman to tears.

I witnessed the incident and was quite surprised when the sergeant after yelling at the woman, turned to a man who was being booked on a drunk charge and addressed him in a milder tone. In fact he was very polite.

• • •

THE WOMAN, Mrs. Betty Morrison, of the 1000 block Ashburton St., had been instructed to give the sergeant a release order for her brother - in - law, who had been convicted on a traffic violation and fined $7.

Mr. Morrison, an employee of the City Housing Authority, also of the Ashburton St., address, found at the end of his hearing that he did not have the money in cash, and offered to pay the fine with a check, which was refused.

Mr. Morrison said that he had not been aware that traffic fines had to be paid with cash.

He was allowed to notify his sister - in - law, who came to the station and paid his fine. Until it was paid, however, he had been locked in a Central District cell.

Mrs. Morrison was attempting to give the sergeant the

GRIEVING FAMILY FINDS IT'S THE WRONG SAM HARRIS

By MAX JOHNSON

There were a number of red faces at Crownsville State Hospital this week.

There was accompanying confusion, embarrassment and frustrating anger in the family of Willard Harris, 800 block N. Caroline St.

Cause of it all—Crownsville officials got mixed up over which of their patients had died.

They sent Mr. Harris, by way of the Elliott Funeral Home, the supposedly body of his brother, Sam, who they said had died late Friday night.

Mr. Harris had the body prepared for burial before he and his family discovered the deceased was not his brother after all, but another patient named Samuel Harris.

His brother, Sam, is still living.

• • •

EVENTS IN this bizarre situation occurred in this fashion.

Mr. Harris, a Bethlehem Steel Co. employee, was notified late Friday that his brother, Sam, 48, had died at the hospital.

He made arrangements with the Elliott Funeral Home and its staff members picked up the body at the hospital Saturday afternoon.

The funeral was set for 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Mr. Harris dispatched two cars to Virginia to bring the mother and relatives here; summoned other relatives; bought a casket, clothing and flowers for the dead man.

Then, the family assembled at the funeral home Monday evening to receive friends—and suddenly discovered the body was not that of their Sam Harris at all.

Confusion and embarrassment jumped to the forefront, and for Mr. Harris' family frustrating anger.

The hospital officials hurriedly checked and found they had gotten the two Harris patients' records mixed. The dead man has no known relatives.

• • •

THEY RECLAIMED the body from the Elliott Funeral Home.

An angry Mr. Harris said Tuesday:

"This is a terrible thing to happen. My family is all shook up. It's more embarrassing and confusing than anything else.

"Somebody must pay, though. I spent over $700 of money I didn't have to make arrangements.

"This is one of those mistakes that doesn't erase easy. A friend of mine lost a day's work to be a pallbearer. This is terrible."

Commented Mrs. Alice Manns of the Elliott Funeral Home:

"This is a terrible mistake for the hospital to make. I don't know what's going to happen now."

• • •

DR. CHARLES WARD, Crownsville superintendent, frankly admitted the hospital's error, and told the AFRO Tuesday:

"We had three Sam Harrises out here. What happened was there is a hospital number for each patient.

"We had the proper number but it was filed in the wrong chart. I don't know that we could prevent a thing like this from happening again.

"But, we will pay them. We will honor all legitimate bills in this case."

The question arises—can handing bills cover for the anxiety of the family of Mr. Harris?
