United States Boys' Working Reserve

The United States Boys' Working Reserve, of which Dr. J. S. William Jones, of Washington College, is Federal County Director, is a registered army of patriotic youths, organized under the Department of Labor, with branches in every state of the Union and in the territory of Hawaii. Its purpose is to mobilize for productive service, chiefly upon American farms, all physically fit boys in the United States between the ages of 16 and 20, and to maintain their education and prevent their exploitation while so mobilized.

Enrollment in the Boys' Working Reserve is entirely voluntary. The boy applies to an enrolling officer of the Reserve in any high school or public library, or to his Federal State or Federal County Director. He fills out an enrollment card, obtains the consent of his parents, takes the oath of service, and receives an enrollment badge and a certificate bearing the great seal of the United States. He is then privileged to put on the military National Reserve uniform with the arm chevron. He is assigned to a farm to work for a period arranged by his Federal State Director. His health and moral welfare are carefully supervised by officials of the Reserve, in co-operation with the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus and the State Board of Health. Upon the satisfactory completion of the period of service for which he is enrolled, the minimum limit of which is six weeks, of six days a week, of eight hours a day, he receives the Federal Bronze Badge bearing the Great Seal of the United States. In adition, he may be awarded the Honorable Service Bar for especially long or meritorious service.

The Boys' Working Reserve was organized in May, 1917. In that year it carried its organization into forty-odd states, brought its program to the attention of the State Councils of Defence in every state of the Union; secured the indorsement of the governors of all states, and mobilized about 100,000 boys and placed them upon the farms of America. In 1918 the Boys' Working Reserve completed its organization in every state of the Union, in the District of Columbia, and in the territory of Hawaii; enrolled and placed upon the farms about 210,000 boys; trained intensively through its Farm-Craft Lessons and its Central Farm Training Camps, about 30,000 high-school boys; and was indirectly the means of sending thousands of younger boys into food production under state auspices.

Navy Wants Men

Commander Leahy, Navy Recruiting Officer for Maryland, has ben urged by the Navy Department to make special efforts to obtain men for the Hospital Corps, Seamen, Machinists Mates, Firemen and Colored Mess Attendants.

During the past few weeks Maryland's quota for the Hospital Corps has not been filled, and this branch of the service offers an unusual opportunity to men with ordinary school education, who are active and desire quick advancement.

All branches of the service are open for enlistments, and the opportunities for promotion were never better. Men who enlisted for the duration of the war are being rapidly disenrolled or discharged and their places must be filled in order to man the ships which are needed to bring the soldiers back from France.

Young men can enlist between the ages of 17 and 35 and can work their way from ordinary seamen to the highest rank in the American Navy.

One hundred young men each year are picked from the enlisted force and sent to the Naval Academy at Annapolis to be trained as officers, and this opening gives to every young man a splendid opportunity if he is energetic enough to take advantage of it.

For further information apply to the Navy Recruiting Station, Calvert and Lexington Sts., Baltimore, or the substation in the Aughinbaugh Building, Hagerstown, or 113 Baltimore St., Cumberland, Md.
