L.A. TB unit cities

LOS ANGELES — The Rev. John H. Owens, rounding out his 10th year of volunteer work with the Los Angeles Tuberculosis and Health Association, recently saw a group of which he is vice president, cited for its service to the association.

GRAMBLING, La. — Dr. Roy Kirkland Davenport, under secretary of Army personnel and Homer B. Walls, personnel management specialist of the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

UNION MEMORIAL SERVICES

Jesus death on cross likened to JFK death

By B. M. MOSS

Jesus went into Jerusalem to make peace. President Kennedy went to Dallas to make peace in the party and to win Texas in the November elections.

The death of Jesus on the cross and the assassination of President Kennedy were likened at Palm Sunday services at Union Memorial Methodist Church.

The pastor, the Rev. N. B. Carrington said that the church must continue to emphasize Jesus' teaching."

* * *

He saw the role of the church as working for equal rights and human dignity just as did President Kennedy did

Lord help the churches if they don't get busy and help the civil rights organizations like the NAACP, and others like students' groups tear down some of the barriers, now, he said.

Twelve young people who finished the confirmation studies were confirmed at the 9 a.m. service.

They are Vikki Banks, Dencie Cherry, Richard Green, Anthony Marcus, Juliet Owens, Zacharian Rodgers, Wade Brown, Jeanette Douglas, Robert Jacobs, Lynnaise Norris, Linda Rodgers, and Patricia Young.

A banquet for the confirmation class was held on Friday.

* * *

Union Memorial cooperated with Perkins Square Baptist for Holy Week services, held at Perkins.

Speakers during the week were the pastor, the Rev. Ward D. Yerby. Other speakers were the Rev. John Robinson, the Rev. Spencer Dobson and the Rev. Mr. Carrington.

Easter Sunday services at Union Memorial will be held at 9 and 11. The combined choirs will sing at both services.

There will be no collection during the 11 a.m. service.

Members are asked to turn in their envelopes and Easter offerings before the service.

The Rev. Mr. Carrington announced this was to keep the Easter church program on a high scale.

* * *

The minister also asked the congregation to remember the following who are sick or shut-in: Mrs. Sarah Cason, 2709 W. North; Mrs. Etta Butler, Carver Home; Mrs. Bessie Harris, 1217 W. Lafayette; Joseph King, 2804 Roslyn Ave., Mrs. Sadie Dorsey and George Dorsey, both of 2020 W. North.

BURIED — Leroy A. (Hickey) Clay, former Army officer and war hero, was buried in his native Baltimore on Monday. He died of injuries inflicted by thugs who attacked him near his Carey St. home on March 12. During World War 2, Mr. Clay, with rank of captain, served with valor in Italy until a celebrated court-martial on charges he refused to obey a superior officer at the front. His 50 - year sentence was later commuted and he was allowed to re-enlist. Police are holding three suspects in the fatal assault on Mr. Clay.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. — The Student Personnel Department, under the direction of J. C. Jones, dean of students, and Mrs. A. W. Shepherard, dean of women, gave special recognition Monday to students who made the Dean's Honor List at Fayetteville State College.

WON "WINGS" IN CALIFORNIA

Politics is Hatcher's first and last love

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — Andrew Hatcher, 138-pound native of Princeton, N.J., who believes "a non-partisan approach" to politics is for people who have no problems?"

A key to Hatcher's effectiveness as a press aide at the White House was revealed last year when a reporter called Salinger to check some information. Since Salinger was not available, the call was transferred to Hatcher, who said he did not know the answer but would get it.

And get it he did! The next voice the startled reporter heard said; "This is John Kennedy. Can I help you?" There was no mistake about it—it was the President himself.

* * *

CALIFORNIA POLITICS is what brought Andrew Hatcher to prominence as the No. 2 White House spokesman.

During his Army service in the mid-forties, he was stationed at Oakland, Calif. and struck up many friendships in the Bay area. When he was discharged in 1946, he returned to Springfield, Mass., to complete the last two years of his college work.

But Andy Hatcher, as he is most often called, was deeply impressed with California.

"I could see this was the State of the future," he recalled.

So he snapped up an offer that came during his senior year from Dr. Carlton Goodlett to serve as editor of the weekly San Francisco Sun-Reporter.

The job on the Reporter made Andy a Jack-of-all trades in the small newspaper field. He served as editor, copyreader, editorial writer and even as delivery boy at times.

THIS VARIED diet eventually led him into politics. He recalled, with some satisfaction, that his newspaper emerged from the Truman campaign with the claim that it was the only paper west of the Mississippi to accurately predict the outcome.

In 1950 he took on his first full-time political job, when he accepted the post of Northern California coordinator for Mrs. Helen Gahagan Douglas in her bid for the U.S. Senate against Richard M. Nixon

This same year he was appointed a court crier to Federal Judge Oliver J. Carter, the state Democratic chairman. Hatcher has genuine affection for Judge Carter—"one of the greatest judges" in his estimation, who taught him "a political lesson a day."

In a matter of weeks, Hatcher became Judge Carter's court clerk, one of the first such positions going to a colored appointee in the Federal court system. This job gave him an opportunity to add to his political knowledge while completing night law courses at Golden Gate College at San Francisco.

* * *

"YOU CAN put it on the record that the Democrats in California spent thousands of dollars on my political indoctrination," he said.

Andy became one of the key planners in the California Organization of Democratic Clubs. He teamed up with five other "crafty" politicians (including Pierre Salinger, whom he first met in 1948.) to put "40,000 volunteercampaign workers in the street."

He mused that he really won his "political wings" when he and Salinger worked for Cong. Jack Shelly on reapportionment plans for the State Senate.

As front man in Northern California for Adlai Stevenson, he organized the former Illinois Governor's Presidential campaigns in 1952 and 1956.

* * *

BUT ANDY did not back a winner until he supported Rep. Clair Engle who upset Goodwin Knight in his 1958 contest for the U.S. Senate.

Although invited to Washington, he turned down a job in Engle's staff to remain in California as assistant Labor Commissioner. During this period he met and became one of Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown's closest advisers. (This association continued strong, for in 1962, Andy spent eight days in California boosting Brown's (campaign.)

The big leap to the White House was triggered in June, 1960, while he was vacationing in Trinidad. Salinger managed to get in touch with Andy by telephone and told him jokingly, "We need you to clinch the nomination for Kennedy."

* * *

THAT PHONE call set in motion a series of events (with Governor Brown's blessing) that landed Hatcher in the White House as, in his words, the Administration's "professional second man." It also was a tip-off that Governor Brown would support candidate Kennedy.

In Washington, Andy could be found at home on northwest Sixteenth St. with his wife, Ruth, and their seven children.

Mrs. Hatcher, a native of Middletown, N.J., and a graduate of Virginia State College at Petersburg, is a former school teacher. She remains completely aloof from politics.

Eugene D. Sawyer dies; was African specialist

Eugene D. Sawyer, 52, of 800 4th St., S.W., foreign service officer, diplomat and African specialist for the U.S. Information Agency, died Wednesday in George Washington University Hospital.

He was stricken Wednesday afternoon while at work in USIA's office of private cooperation where he was area officer for Africa, assisting and guiding voluntary and international social, cultural and economic programs.

He served in Germany, Liberia, India, Ghana, and Cameroon. He was executive director of the Washington Welfare Association from 1947 to 1949.

* * *

BORN IN Topeka, Kans., Oct. 1, 1911, Mr. Sawyer received a B.S. from Kansas State Teachers College in 1935, and worked for the next year as a supervisor in recreation with the National Youth Administration in Topeka.

From 1936 to 1937, he was director of health and physical education at the Dallas YMCA. In the following two years, he was a director of health and physical education in the San Antonio, Tex. as public school system.

He returned to the National Youth Administration in Topeka as its supervisor in 1940. In 1941-43, he was director of health and physical education in the Baltimore, Maryland YMCA and in the subsequent two years held a similar position at the 135th St. YMCA in N.Y.C.

* * *

MR. SAWYER began his overseas assignment in 1945 when he became principal welfare officer for UNRA, in Traunstein, Germany, handling the displaced persons program there.

He was appointed a foreign service officer on Aug. 1, 1949 and assigned to Monrovia, Liberia as public affairs officer and attache. On July 6, 1951, he was assigned to New Delhi, India as public affairs officer and assistant attache. A year later he went to Bombay as public affairs officer and vice counsel.

From 1952-58 he was public affairs officer and counsel in Accra, Ghana. After a brief stay in Washington, he was assigned to Yaounde, Cameroon on Dec. 13, 1959 as public affairs officer and attache.

* * *

HE RETURNED to Washington Nov. 1, 1962 to begin a tour of duty as an advisor in USIA's office of private cooperation.

At his post overseas, Mr. Sawyer directed press, film, library and exchange of person programs. He was one of the best known Americans in all of West Africa and called the dignitaries of many countries by their first names.

He is survived by his wife, Joan, and a daughter, Margo, age 5.

Widow victim of flim-flam, Loses $1,900

"It was more than half my life's savings. My husband and I worked hard for that money."

Speaking to the AFRO was Mrs. Bessie L. Turner, 65, of 408 Pitman Pl., who last week fell victim to flim-flam artists wro left a $1,900 shortage in her bank account.

Her story, not unlike that told by other victims over a period of many years, began like this:

"I had just walked out of the bank where I had made a deposit. You know, I have not taken anything out of that bank in over two years.

* * *

"WELL, ANYHOW, I was not far from the bank when I stopped to look at something in a store window and two well-dressed women, slender and not bad looking, walked up to me and said they found a large amount of money in a trash can.

"They said they wanted to divide it with me. I said, 'I don't want any of that money'. But they kept on talking and one of them said my share would be $5,000.

Of course, after this there was the usual telephone call to an agent, this time called "their worker", and the unfortunate walk back to the bank for "trust money".

"I turned the money over to the woman and she instructed me to return to the telephone booth and I would be contacted. I waited for a half-an-hour "then realized what had happened," said Mrs. Turner, a widow, since 1961.

* * *

THUS AGAIN, the old cliche bears true, that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush".

In conclusion, Mrs. Turner declared, "I've heard of these things happening to other people, but I never expected it to happen to me.

"Something just came over me. That's the only way can explain it."

PALMA project for Provident

Participation in PALMA's Provident Hospital Fund Campaign by members of churches, clubs and other organized groups starts next Wednesday, April 1.

The plan whereby members of these groups can contribute to the Hospital Fund without cost was devised by members of the Pennsylvania Avenue Lafayette Market Association, the store owners in the 1500 to 1800 blocks Pennsylvania Avenue and in the Lafayette Market.

Starting April 1 and continuing through April 30, a percentate of the purchase price of merchandise bought in Palma stores will be allocated to the Provident Hospital Fund. Rules and conditions are set forth on each of the Participating Organization Certificates.

After April 30, the organization is to total the amount spent in Palma stores and return the certificates to PALMA Provident Hospital Fund Campaign.

Groups may secure Participating Organization Certificates by contacting PALMA at 1723 Pennsylvania Ave. or calling LA. 3-1100.

'F-L-A-S-H-' 8 hurt when car smashes into night club

Two barmaids and six customers were injured Thursday night when a run-away car slammed into the Uptown Club at Edmondson Ave., and Monroe St., police reported.

The car, a late model sedan, crashed through the panel glass window on the Edmondson Ave. side of the club after colliding with another auto southbound on Monroe St.

Eyewitnesses told police that the driver of the car backed the vehicle out of the club, parked it on the street and fled the scene. No suspect had been arrested at AFRO presstime, police said.

THOSE INJURED were treated and released, hospital officials reported. They were:

Mesdames Bertha Rivera, 28, 600 block Sarah Ann; Alice Saylor, 25, 300 block W. North; Lillian Curley, 35, 1700 block N. Appleton; and Mrs. Elizabeth Shannon, 26, 2000 block Woodrock Ave.

Also James Stewart, 34, 2800 block Ellicott Drive; Morris Jennings, 2800 block Rayner Ave.; Donald Thomas, 34, 2020 E. Lanvale; and John Dawkins, 32, 1100 block N. Bentalou.

James Gross, manager, described the accident this way:

"We thought someone had thrown a bomb. Everybody panicked. It's a miracle that no one was killed."

THE REV. T. S. HARPER of St. Matthews Church, treasurer of the Allen Building Fund from July 1953 to March 1956, said that income for the Allen Building was $91,980, while disbursements included $28,135 for repairs and $5,000 for taxes during the period.

There were other expenditures and a balance of $16,765.12, which the Mr. Harper testified "the District voted several uses for."

118 CHECKS

BISHOP BRIGHT, former pastor of Mother Bethel AME Church of Philadelphia and elected to the bishopric in May, 1960, at the Los Angeles general conference, in a three and one half hour night session Tuesday, and five hours on Wednesday afternoon, merely verified and identified signatures on approximately 118 checks offered in evidence by Assistant District Attorney A. Joseph Rieffel.

A jury of four men and eight women, all white, with two women alternates, began to display signs of weariness as the trial reached its third day of an estimated two week duration.

The "evidence" marked as part of the commonwealth's case, is apparently stacks of photostatic copies of check issued over the '52-'56 period charged in the indictments — allegedly covering the staggering 42 indictments that include 56 counts of alleged embezzlement and fraud.

DENY DELAY

ORPHAN'S COURT Judge Kendall H. Shover is presiding as a Common pleas court jurist in the trial that has been postponed over a dozen times since 1958 — with not a single delay requested by Bishop Nichols and his defense counsel.

Representing Bishop Nichols are Attorneys Abraham J. Brem Levy, and Isaiah W. Crippens, the latter a former assistant district attorney of Philadelphia.

While Assistant DA Rieffel told the court and jury that he intends to prove that between 1952 and 1956, while Bishop Nichols headed the First Episcopal District, he "misused, misapplied and converted to his own use thousands and thousands of dollars in church funds", thus far, the Commonwealth's case has evoked spurts of courtroom laughter as Defense Counsel Levy occasionally "assists" the assistant DA in clasifying certain check.

HE'S AT EASE

BISHOP NICHOLS, facing a race with time which means the general conference in May, and the climactic date of his "suspension" pending the outcome, appears at ease and breaks into smile upon the testimony of almost every check introduced as "evidence." Levy and Crippens blasted the theory of an alleged "mystery fund" claimed by the Commonwealth as the dumping ground of the alleged siphoned-off monies.

Nichols' lawyers told the court and jury that they would prove that the Bishop "never took two cents of the church money," and that the "account" referred to by Rieffel had the approval of the AME Episcopal committee and was "common knowledge to everybody."

Unless the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania introduces an unhitter to mentioned "account" before it rests its case and Rieffel stated at the Wednesday p.m. recess that he might close on the following day (Thursday), it became evident that the "mystery account" was in fact, the "D. Ward Nichols, Bishop special account," in the Broad Street Trust Bank of Philadelphia.

SPECIAL ACCOUNT

THE ACCOUNT in question came early in the trial and was highlighted by two instances where witnesses admitted that Bishop Nichols "loaned" them monies from the "special account" to help purchase a building in one case, and to help them turn in a 100 per cent report on assessments at a conference held in New York City.

It was Bishop Bright, who identified a check drawn on the Bishop Nichols' "special account" on Oct. 6, 1953, for the sum of $1,500, and testified that the photostatic copy also carried his endorsement signature.

Bishop Bright, then pastor of Mother Bethel, told the court that his congregation could only raise $500 of a $2,000 assessment due at a New York conference. He said that Bishop Nichols told him, "I would like for you to make a big conference report — I will let you have it".

PLEADS SURPRISE

BRIGHT TESTIFIED that his congregation paid the assessment and that he repaid Bishop Nichols in three payments of $500 each without interest within six months.

The other prosecution witness who told of actually being befriended by Bishop Nichols through a loan, was the Rev. Richard R. Stokes, pastor of Greater Mt. Olive AME Church, Philadelphia.

The Rev. Mr. Stokes testified that Bishop Nichols presumed to have been one of the key factors in the states case, caused Assistant DA Rieffel to "plead surprise" and make a request of the court to cross-examine his own witness.

Rev. Mr. Stokes told the court and jury of his collection of "roll call money" as chairman of the registration annual conference of the 1st Episcopal district, amounting to $2500.

FOR EDUCATION

TURNING THE SUM over to Bishop Nichols in check form, Rev. Mr. Stokes said that he was "ordered by the Bishop to take the check to the finance committee and get it cashed. He said that he conveyed the sum to Bishop at his office on N. 16th St., Philadelphia.

Under cross examination by Levy, Pastor Stokes said that the monies were earmarked for the AME education fund. The motion was "moved and seconded" authorizing the monies to be turned over for that purpose.

Rev. Mr. Stokes said that he couldn't account for the sum after that point.

$250 CHECK

TESTIFYING TO a $250 check payable to "Rev. R. R. Stokes" dated May 27, 1955, The Rev. Mr. Stokes told the court that the sum was used to rent a house across the street from the annual conference site, "because the Bishop had a lot of visitors that the parsonage couldn't accommodate. He said that he turned the check over to the steward's board of Greater Mt. Olive Church.

Rev. Stokes then told of Bishop Nichols' suggesting the purchase of another building in 1950, when Greater Mt. Olive occupied a deteriorating building on Clifton St., just south of South St. "The machinery was put in motion," he said, to purchase the present property at 19th and Fitzwater Sts., at $45,000, but Greater Mt. Olive could only raise $5,000.

The Rev. Mr. Stokes testified that Bishop Nichols "got $1,000 from the annual conference, to secure the $15,000 down payment. He also told of another occasion when his church borrowed $1,000 from Bishop Nichols when a back wall collapsed, and paid it back in two installments of $500 each.

$850 CHECK

THE REV. J. L. Dandridge, pastor of Zion AME Church, 21st and Tasker Sts., Phila., who testified that "it is the custom in our church, not to question the bishop," said that he wasn't explained to him that a check he was asked to cash on March 2, 1956, was for funds applied to a trip to Florida.

The sum of $850, drawn on the Board St. Trust Co. Phila annual conference account, according to a query put by Attorney Levy to the witness, was for travel to the Bishop's Council.

Rev. Mr. Dandridge, under cross - examination, said he could not remember the notation marked on the check.

Joseph D. Tydings, candidate for Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, continued his blast this week at the Goldstein camp, for questioning the exclusion of the word "advertisement" from one of his political ads.

He countered with these charges against Louis L. Goldstein, state comptroller, the Tawes Administration supported candidate for the Senate seat:

"On March 18, 1964 in the major Maryland metropolitan newspaper, Mr. Goldstein published advertisements on television and radio pages calling attention to his testimonial dinner that night.

"Nowhere in Mr. Goldstein's advertisements did the word 'advertisement' appear. His ad contained the words Anth Nicholas C. Mueller, treasurer' with no other desination whatsoever.

The Tydings camp announced that Delegate Nancy Brown Burkheimer (D. Cecil), House of Delegates member and University of Maryland Law School Student, has been named chairman of the Statewide Students for Tydings Committee.

$1,400, still had a $342.88 balance.

Under cross examination by Mr. Levy, the bank representative pointed out that his records showed over eight transferrals of sums ranging from $200 to $700 from the Bishop's special account to cover overdrafts on the First Episcopal account.

BISHOP BRIGHT

While Defense Counsel Levy and Crippins declared during a recess that the commonwealth is "really doing a fire job of accounting for us," it was the prolonged interrogation of Bishop Bright, whose signature was recurred on many of the checks in question, and to whom many of the checks from the "Bishop's special account" was made payable BISHOP BRIGHT was under cross - examination when the court recessed shortly after 5 p.m., on Wednesday and was scheduled to resume on Thursday.

Under direct examination, Bishop Bright was queried by Assistant DA Rieffel on approximately 106 of the 118 checks thus far entered as evidence. He was asked to identify the checks, the amounts, recall the purpose for which it was allegedly used, and identify the endorsement. It was the Bishop's accurate recollection of almost each check that appeared to rattle the prosecution.

SIGNATURES

The prelate explained that the Philadelphia Annual Conference accounts required the signatures of himself, The Rev. Kelsey Keeys, and Bishop Nichols between the years in the indictment; That The First Episcopal District account required the signatures of Bishop Nichols, The Presiding Elder Mansfield E. Jackson, and The Rev. J. L Link.

Bishop Bright was asked to identify the payees on checks made on the Phila. conference account, which included four Nichols, whom he described as the Bishop's daughter, among them a $35,00 check made to Richard Allen Community Center of NYC. He testified that he knew Miss Nichols to be in charge of the center, but didn't connect it as "the official" body of the AME church.

EUROPEAN TRIPS

UNDER CROSS examination, he told the court that he knew the center was housed in the Mt. Zion AME Church of New York, but couldn't state as to how many people were employed in the center.

He admitted under direct examination that he had signed the checks involved but could only testify as to the check itself. Bishop Bright testified in the same vein with regards to several checks ranging from $19 to $4,510.50, payable to Fire Marquez Travel agency in New York City, which the defense states represents travels made by Bishop Nichols to Europe as a member of the World Council of Churches. Bishop Bright admitted under cross examination, "I knew that the Bishop made several trips to Europe."

Other checks described and each earmarked for the purpose it was used by notations on the check face, included payments of telephone bills in NY and Phila., gas and electric buls, fuel oil, $19.94 check paid for a repair of a Cad
