The Victory Loan

Once more we're called, in victory's cause and hour,
To make response, to limit of our power,
And so to seal in bonds, that will make good,
The cause for which our soldiers shed their blood.

What price they paid, in youthful lives laid down,
To win the cause that won for them a "crown—
Unfading" there—here just a wooden cross
To mark their sacred dust and typify our loss!

How little seems the best that we can give—
In view of those who died that we might live;
That our beloved country might be free
From horrors they have suffered o'er the sea.
Then let us all respond to full extent,
(To Uncle Sam, you know, 'tis only lent),
And settle now, forever and for all.
Our country's just and patriotic call.
—M. P. BRYAN.

To Increase Local Telephone Rates

Mr. R. C. Harris, Local Agent of The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, gave out the following statement regarding the raising of the telephone rates in Kent county, which becomes effective May 1.

The Federal Government assumed control of the property and business of this company on August 1, 1918. Since that time it has been operated under Government supervision. The Act of Congress under which the Government took over the control provided that the corporation should be paid a just compensation for the use of its property, and a contract was made covering this compensation. This contract provides for the up-keep of the property, a continuance of the past high grade of service, and the payment of interest and dividends at the same rates as heretofore. Therefore, the monies now collected for telephone service belong to the Government.

But, even under Government control, there is no reason why the business should be operated at a loss. To do so means that a deficit must be paid out of taxation. At the rates now being charged, there is not enough revenue to meet expenses, and it is imperative that the rates for local service be increased. The telephone business, just like the individual, has been suffering from steadily increasing costs. Every means possible has been applied to meet this difference between revenue and expenses by economies, but we have reached the point now where the business must have increased revenue if it is to maintain a satisfactory service and not result in a direct loss to the Government.

Every effort has been made towards making the burden of this increase fall as lightly as possible upon the subscriber and the community, and as a matter of fact, the increased cost to the subscriber is insignificant in comparison with the increased cost of commodities generally.
