450 at rites for mother slain in county shooting

At least six members of the grieving family had to be carried bodily from the Town Neck Asbury Methodist Church Monday during funeral services for Mrs. Thelma Pack, who was slain last Wednesday in Earleigh Heights, Anne Arundel County.

Some 450 people crowded the church as the Rev. S. T. Collins, Asbury Methodist pastor, conducted the rites.

Also participating in the services were the Revs. Samuel Beard, Wayman Good Hope Church, and Norris Morgan, Silas Baptist Church Earleigh Heights.

The Thomas Gospel Choir of Asbury Methodist provided the music. Funeral arrangements were handled by the Charles E. Hicks Funeral Home.

A LARGE crowd of friends joined the family in graveside rites as the husband, Randolph Pack, and each of the eight children tossed flowers into the grave.

Mrs. Pack was one of two women whose lives were blasted away by a shotgun allegedly wielded by George Washington Jones, 38, a construction worker, and husband of the second victim, Mrs. Mattie Jones.

Police also accuse Jones of the shooting of Willie Gooch, 2200 block Riggs Ave., a 42-year-old grocery clerk employed in the same Anne Arundel store as the two slain women.

Anne Arundel County police point to jealousy as the motive for the shootings.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jones were held Sunday in Farmville, Va.

SHOOTING VICTIM BURIED — Rites were held Monday for Mrs. Thelma Pack, victim of a double slaying last week in the Anne Arundel community of Earleigh Heights. Members of the grieving family are shown at the graveside following funeral services at Town Neck Asbury Methodist Church, which was filled to capacity.

James Matthews

James T. Matthews, 72, 60 S. Culver St., died Saturday at St. Agnes Hospital.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at the above home. Burial was in Baltimore National Cemetery.

Mr. Matthews was a former employee of Western Union.

He is survived by a sister, the Rev. Mildred S. Fisher; a brother, John T. Matthews; a step-daughter, Mrs. Harrise TaBout; a niece, Mrs. Fannie Moraine; three nephews, Rudolf, Milton, and Elworth Rice; two great nephews, Lloyd and Craig Newton.

An aunt, Mrs. Rachel Logan, also survives.

cause the brand was not sold in the store, and sent one of six boys in the place at the time to call Mr. Clay back.

After picking up his empties, Clay was heckled by the teen-agers, witnesses said. At this point he pushed one of the boys.

Out in the street the pushing continued and built into a fight during which the former Army officer suffered a concussion from a blow to the head.

TWO HOUSEWIVES, residents of the block, testified that they witnessed a scene in which a boy was "kicking and stomping on a man."

The two women agreed that the "boy was tall," but could not further identify the assailant.

Testimony from Dr. Werner Spitz, who performed the autopsy on Clay, gave his cause of death as bronchial pneumonia and pulmonary embolism.

Dr. Spitz stated that in cases where the patient has received a blow to the head, unconciousness frequently results which alters respiration. This alteration of respiration usually shows up as bronchial pneumonia.

Noting that Clay was unconcious for prolonged periods in the hospital, Dr. Spitz said that blood clots, which contribute to pulmonary embolism, often form in unconscious patients.

QUESTIONED by Civil Liberties Union lawyer, Fred Weisgal, who defended Boyd Dr. Spitz said that in the case of Clay's death "the primary cause is to be looked for in the blow to the head."

GREEN, WHO took the witness stand in his own defense, stated that the group of boys were in the store because "there was a new girl that started to work in there and we wanted to get acquainted."

He described the events leading up to the incident and testified that Clay attacked his friend Boyd with a broken bottle and cut him.

Green said his only participation in the fight was to push Clay away from Boyd once when Clay had the bottle. After he pushed Clay away, he said, he attempted to take Boyd away from the scene, but Boyd broke away and headed for the man again.

Morris Lee Kaplan, lawyer for Green, later said his client ought to have been "commended, instead of indicted" for protecting an unarmed man from a man with a broken bottle.

AN EARLIER witness, Phillip Hamilton, 19, 2100 block Division St., refused to acknowledge a statement that he had signed and reportedly given to police after the fight.

Prosecutor Angeletti expressed surprise" that Hamilton's testimony under questioning "differed from the statement he gave police."

Hamilton's assertion on the stand that Boyd, alias "Doc," "hit the man only once" contrasted with the account of a more violent struggle that he had given police.

Hamilton said in court that "the man came back at Boyd. Boyd hit the man and the man fell. He laid there. Nobody kicked or hit him. Boyd walked away."

ANGELETTI read portions from the statement Hamilton had given police and stopped after each paragraph to ask, "Did you tell police that?"

Hamilton stuck to the story he had told in court and answered "no sir" to statements read which conflicted with his court testimony.

Asked why he signed a statement which was not the truth, "Hamilton charged, "They (the police) said they would beat me on the head, if I didn't give them a better statement."

In his closing defense of Boyd, attorney Weisgal argued that the youth's actions showed no premeditation or malice and quoted Boyd's remark, "I had no reason to kill a man.

"I had never seen him before. I had no reason to hurt him, except he cut me up."

In convicting the youths of manslaughter, Judge Harlan declared they had used "too much force," more than was necessary to defend themselves.

several obscene remarks at his wife.

Mr. Gwynn stated he rebuked the occupants of the car and an argument ensued during which one of them displayed a revolver and shot at him.

The shot missed he and his wife, the fireman reported, and went through the display window of a package goods store located at the intersection of Garrison Blvd. and Liberty Heights Ave.

MEANWHILE, Patrol Bafford, ho was ordering a cup of coffee in a nearby restaurant was informed of the shooting. He questioned the couple, then using a call box, reported the description of the vehicle and its occupants.

As he finished his call, someone yelled to him that the suspects had returned and were parked in the 3300 block Garrison Blvd.

Witnesses stated he had approached the car and was about to question the occupants when a shot was fired.

They said the patrolman staggered across the street as two more shots rang out, then fell to the ground.

In a matter of seconds, other police arrived and placed the youths under arrest.

THE SUSPECTS were described by one officer as acting strangely.

He said he asked the youths who did the the shooting and one of them replied, almost gleefully, "I did. I did!"

Charges are expected to be filed accusing one of the suspects of the murder today.

The slaying follows by just a month the Sept. 11 killing of Water P. Matthys, a young policeman, who was shot while arresting a mentally ill man.

EYES ON THE ELECTION

2 political scientists predict race votes may be 'decisive'

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Race votes may come during next month's Presidential election, according to two Howard University political scientists, Howard F. Gosnell and Robert E. Martin.

Both veteran observers of American politics, Gosnell and Martin put down their views in an article, "The Negro Vote," which appears in the October issue of the Howard University Magazine.

With the heavy migration of colored people from the South to urban areas of the North and West, the colored vote now represents the balance of power in eight major industrial states, each vital to the Presidential candidates, they say.

THE WAY THE COLORED vote goes in California, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania may well determine the outcome of a close election, is the way the authors see it.

According to them, the number of colored people in the South remained virtually stationary in the decade prior to the 1960 election, while the colored population of the above states increased by 55 percent during that period. The rate of increase has continued since 1960.

"The estimated number of colored people registered in the South was around 1 million in 1952 and around 1.4 million in 1960," the professors say in pointing out an increase in voter registration in the South as well.

"This represented an increase in the percentage of colored people of voting age registered from 20 to 28. Of the Southern States, Tennessee has the best record for colored voter registration with some 40 per cent on the rolls; Mississippi has the worst record, hardly 8 percent."

GOSNELL AND MARTIN maintain that the percentage of colored voters in the South would have been far greater had it not been for "a concerted effort ... by white race extremists to halt colored registration efforts."

In 1961, the Civil Rights Commission reported that in 100 counties in 8 Southern States there was "reason to believe that substantial discriminatory disfranchisement of colored people still exists."

The Commission found political participation was equally widespread in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and South Carolina.

Analyzing the past four Presidential elections, Gosnell and Martin say that the 1948 Truman victory and that of Kennedy in 1960 were due in large measure to the colored vote.

The vote of the nation's largest minority remained loyal to the Democratic "Roosevelt Coalition" when Eisenhower defeated Stevenson in 1952, they say, but a far greater number of colored people voted Republican in 1956 following the Eisenhower Administration's role in the 1954 school desegregation cases.

THE SUCCESS IN 1960 of Senator Kennedy, whom the writers say had "won no particular popularity among colored people," is attributed in no small measure to the late President's role in the release of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., from the Atlanta jail in the month prior to the election.

The authors conclude that the recent voter registration drives in many areas of the South have offset the effects of discriminatory disfranchisement.

However, they observed, "the registration drives are not over yet and it may take years before their effectiveness can be assessed."

Slate mental test for bomb suspect

MAGNOLIA, Miss. (UPI) — A rich man's son, one of 11 white residents accused in racial bombings here, has been admitted to the state mental hospital for tests, it was learned Tuesday.

Official sources said Sterling (Bubber) Gillis, 35, who was accused of bank robbery and armed robbery in addition to the dynamiting charge, was admitted to Whitfield State Hospital near Jackson Friday.

Gillis was released Friday from jail on two $10,000 bonds, one to the state and the other to the Federal courts, on the robbery charges.

Two other white men accused in the bombings, Jimmy F. Wilson, 38, and Ernest F. Zeeck, 25, were arraigned today before a Circuit Judge on indictments handed down by the grand jury. They pleaded innocent.
