Rev. King
By MARY STRATFORD
AFRO Staff Correspondent

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The Rev. Martin Luther King has detailed a meeting with a Johnson Administration official which may have changed the course of events in the demonstration Tuesday in Selma.

He was questioned about the meeting as the lead witness in Montgomery Federal Court Thursday in a motion to enjoin Selma police from further brutality during protests against voter registration practices.

* * *

IN THE AFTERNOON, testimony began to unfold from other witnesses concerning alleged abuse by Selma law enforcement authorities.

Federal Judge Frank Johnson queried King closely about the "agreement" reached by him with former Florida Governor Leroy Collins now director of the Community Relations Service, prior to the march.

Closely related to the agreement is the question of the Rev. Mr. King's intention when he set out on the demonstration which ended peacefully

* * *

JUDGE JOHNSON must decide, along with the request for an injunction against police, whether King is in contempt of a temporary restraining order which he issued banning the march pending Thursday's hearing.

The marchers were put under court restraint after they announced plans for another attempt would be made to walk from Selma to Montgomery to present grievances against police and voting officials to Gov. George Wallace.

Judge Johnson acted to head off the second attempt to march to Montgomery after about 60 persons were injured in an attack by police as they left Selma Sunday.

* * *

SELMA SHERIFF James Clark, who has been accused, of brutalizing would-be voters, asked the court to hold King in contempt for leading the second march in spite of the court's restrainer.

Judge Johnson immediately dismissed Clark's motion for contempt, explaining that any contempt proceeding is a matter between the court and the alleged contemptor.

He stated it was not a matter for Clark and that he was dismissing the motion without regard to whether or not subsequent contempt proceedings are initated by the court.

UNDER CROSS-examination, King declared, "We never did anticipate a march to Montgomery."

He said he was faced with the responsibility of providing a non-violent outlet for pent-up frustrations as against a demonstration of the kind which could have become violent.

King said that former Gov. Collins, in a conversation with him, urged him not to lead the march. Collins intimated that it was an explosive situation and would be tragic for the whole nation.

King's wife says cause would go on without him

SEATTLE, Wash., (UPI)—Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. said Tuesday that if anything happened to take her husband out of the civil rights movement, the cause would continue.

Mrs. King arrived here from San Francisco for a "Freedom Concert" Tuesday night, sponsored by the Mount Zion Baptist Church. She arrived at about the time the Rev. Mr. King was leading an army of civil rights marchers at Selma, Ala.

"You realize that what you are doing is pretty dangerous, but we go with the faith that what we are doing is right," she said at a news conference.

"If something happens to my husband, the cause will continue. It may even be helped. Persons who followed him would continue to follow the non - violent cause."

* * *

MRS. KING said she, her husband and their four children have learned to live under the threat of violence during the past nine and a half years.

"They (the children) have accepted very well the fact that their father must do this," she said. "I have tried to explain that God has to heave helpers to do his work and daddy is a helper."

Mrs. King said she wished that she could have been with her husband at Selma.

"My husband feels it important that one parent remain at home to give them (the children) security," she said. "But I would like to make a more complete witness by marching, and if necessary, going to jail."
