How To Raise An Orphan Colt

Artificial Feeding With Mixture Of Mare's And Cow's Milk Is Best.

It sometimes happens that a mare will die soon after foaling, leaving an orphan to be raised by the farmer. The raising of the orphan colt usually taxes the resources of the breeder, but it can be successfully accomplished. The following points are good to remember in case a mare dies or gives insufficient milk:

In such cases artificial feeding must be resorted to. Cow's milk furnishes a most logical substitute for mare's milk, but as the composition is somewhat different, certain changes or modifications are necessary in order that the supplied diet be not too dissimilar from the natural. The following table of percentages gives the average composition of the two kinds of milk:

| | Water. | Protein. | Fat. | Sugar. | Ash. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cow's Milk. | 87.17 | 3.55 | 3.69 | 4.88 | 0.71 |
| Mare's Milk | 90.78 | 1.99 | 1.21 | 5.67 | .35 |

Milk from as fresh a cow as possible and which is not rich in butter fat should be diluted about one-fourth with fresh water. A tablespoonful of sugar and about 3 teaspoonfuls of lime water should be added for each pint. This mixture should be supplied to the colt at about body temperature. A bottle with a rubber nipple, or even a finger of a kid glove with a fair-sized hole in it fitted over the end of a spout of a vessel such as a teapot, will serve as a convenient utensil in getting the foal to take the milk. If the finger of a kid glove is used it should be as clean as possible. At first about one-half a cup of milk should be given every hour, the quantity to be increased slightly and the intervals to be lengthened gradually as the foal grows older. In about 2 months skimmed milk may be substituted for whole milk, and in addition one of the following rations should be fed: One part of flaxseed meal boiled to a jelly, and 2 or 3 parts of bran. Or 2 parts ground oats, 1 part corn meal, and one-half part flaxseed meal. Or 2 parts of bran, 2 parts corn meal, and 1 part oil meal. Feed a double handful a day to start with, and increase the amount gradually.

Raising a foal by hand is not a job for the careless and indifferent. It requires patience, painstaking care, perseverance, judgment, and cleanliness. The vessel in which the milk is supplied should be scalded thoroughly each time it is used. Unclean receptacles for the milk and irregular intervals for feeding likely will cause scours. The quarters should be very clean and the orphaned foal should have company of some kind. Another foal is desirable, but even a calf is better than no company. A grassy paddock with abundant shade, fresh water, and protection from flies will increase the orphan's chance of proper development.

THOROUGHBREDS TO BE SHOWN.

From present indications, that special feature—the showing of thoroughbred stallions—which made such a hit last year at Timonium Fair, will again be a feature this year. A splendid tribute was paid the class of thoroughbreds last year when Frank J. Bryan wrote: "During the recent fair of the Maryland State Fair and Agricultural Society of Baltimore county, at Timonium, Md., special effort was made to interest the people of that community in the thoroughbred horse. Among other methods was a class for the thoroughbred stallions that have been placed in Maryland, and eight were brought on for competition and remained throughout the week. Never in my life do I recall as many thoroughbred stallions shown at one time, not even at the Madison Square Garden, with its big shows."

The horse show which is to be in conjunction with the Timonium Fair this year is being planned for on a scale that should make it one of the best horse shows ever held in Maryland.

POOR FEED BAD FOR COLTS.

Good breeding is absolutely essential to the production of marketable horses which will bring top prices, but good breeding must be supplemented by proper feeding and management if the finished product is to be satisfactory. Figures collected at the Chicago stock yards show that flesh on high-class draft horses is worth about 25 cents a pound. It is worth equally as much on high-class horses of the lighter types. Certainly, then, it is more profitable to give the colts the good feed produced on the farm than to sell such feed and attempt to keep the colts and mares on the unsalable trash. Poor feed in scant quantity makes ewe necks, waspy waists, cat hams, starey coats—in short, an unsalable horse.

Horses always are needed to do farm work as well as for other purposes, and generally they can be raised from farm mares more cheaply than they can be purchased, while the surplus, if of proper breeding and liberally fed on suitable, balanced rations, will find ready sale at good prices because they will have the characteristics that suggest the ability to do work satisfactorily and profitably.

Mr. Hubbard Found Lost Jewels

The "Wilmington Every Evening" recently contained the following interesting account of how some valuable jewels were found by Mr. Wilbur W. Hubbard, of Chestertown, after having been misplaced at the old Custom House several months ago. The article follows:

Mr. Wilbur W. Hubbard had an interesting and unusual experience one day last week, at the old Custom House, which he owns, and which he sometime ago remodeled, making a large apartment of it. On the occasion of the marriage of his daughter, Miss Miriam, eight months ago, to Lieut. George Morris, of Washington, the mother of the groom occupied an apartment in the Custom House. When she retired on the night of the wedding, she placed the handsome jewelry which she wore, including a diamond necklace and pin valued at between $500 and $1,000 in an envelope on the window sill in her room, intending to place it in its case before she retired. She inadvertently left the valuable parcel on the window sill and thought no more of it until she reached her home in Washington some days later.

Mr. Hubbard knew nothing of the occurrence, as the lady regarded it as rather an indelicate thing to mention the loss. Last Saturday, afternoon Mrs. A. E. Physick, a friend of the Hubbard family, had occasion to go to the room occupied by the wedding guest, and while viewing an excursion of Christian Endeavorers from Baltimore, her eye fell upon the envelope. She picked it up, examined its contents, at once recognized their value, and immediately took it to Mr. Hubbard with the explanation that it had been found in the room in the Custom House. Mr. Hubbard remembered that the groom's mother had occupied that room on the occasion of his daughter's marriage, and he immediately called his guest over the phone and asked her if the precious package belonged to her. She informed Mr. Hubbard that it did, and he forwarded it by registered mail to the lady.

This package had lain in the same place in that room for eight months, without any one detecting its valuable contents, and nowithstanding the fact that Mr. Hubbard had sent his servants to the room to clean, the envelope was not noticed by them, or any one else who had occasion to visit the room. Mr. Hubbard's guest was overjoyed when she learned of the recovery of her jewels.

Miss Anna Duyer, of Chestertown, spent the week-end with friends. Miss Duyer is attending summer school at State Normal School. She is taking a six weeks course in elementary work.

Miss Frances Coburn is attending summer school at Ocean City.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Chestertown Citizens Show A Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Chestertown citizen says:

Mrs. May C. Frazier, High St., says: "I suffered from my kidneys and backache. At times I had dizzy spells and black spots before my eyes. My back ached when I had to bend over and my kidneys didn't act right at all. I surely was feeling miserable until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from The Stam Drug Co. I used them and had great relief."
