though she was employed, she did not have sufficient funds to support herself and the child or to defray court costs and expenses.

MR. URQUHART said in an answer to the petition that his wife was employed as a teacher in the city school system and earned more money than he, that she lived in a Barrington Rd. home which had been purchased by them as tenants by the entireties and that she drives a Lincoln automobile.

Mr. Urquhart said that her net income was $267 bi-weekly, that she had no income during July and August, that she paid the mortgage notes of $132 per month on the home and that her total bills amounted to $556 per month.

She added that when she and her husband went on a vacation to Nova Scotia last year, their joint bank account had been depleted.

Mrs. Urquhart maintained that she needed an additional $75 a week to maintain the manner of living she and the child had enjoyed.

Mr. Urquhart, now living at 2410 Loyola Northway, said that he had to make a loan of $600 to move. He said that his take home pay was $218 bi-weekly and that his expenses, including $119 a month rent, and $59.82 car notes, amounted to $323.22 a month.

MASTER GARVEY, who recommended payments of $40 to Mrs. Urquhart, pointed out that the $15 in addition to the $25 for child support, did not actually represent alimony for the wife if one considered that she is paying the husband's share of the mortgage payment.

Judge James K. Cullen confirmed the Master's recommendation. William I. Gosnell, attrney for Mr. Urquhart, filed an appeal. Following a deposition on Sept. 8, Judge Byrnes ruled that the abandonment had taken place and that Mr. Urquhart must pay $25 a week for the child, and that the $15 a week to Mrs. Urquhart go to pay on the dental bill.

The judge also said that he would sign such an order and include $250 payment to Paul R. Roehlin, attorney for the wife.

signed to an airbourne unit named Head.

Investigators discovered that the soldier was not in the area at the time of the attack and then discovered that a number of soldiers had the word "head" written on their caps.

ONE OF the investigators told the AFRO that the Army is trying to determine if this name represents some special gang or other clandestine group.

Another rumor circulated through the camp which led police to believe that a small band of unidentified men have been grabbing people at night and cutting Xs on their chests and arms.

The Criminal Investigation Department and the Military Intelligence Bureau has launched a full scale investigation of the incidents.

They have refused to release the identity of the victim pending notification of next of kin.

Annapolis Alderman Norwood T. Brown will resign from his seat on the City Council to become Human Relations and Redevelopment Officer for the Urban Renewal Authority.

Aspiring to take his seat are William Richardson, Samuel Gilmer, Thomas Hunt, James Boardley, Harvey Ennis, Charles Walker, Jr., John T. Chambers, Jr. and Milton Haskins, the AFRO learned Monday.

At the Monday committee meeting of the council, Alderman Brown told the council of the background and qualifications of each of the potential candidates "as he knew them."

Asked if he would name his own successor, Mr. Brown replied: "I cannot vote. A successor will be nominated and voted on by the council members after I resign."

"More than likely one of the candidates I introduced to the council will be chosen," predicted the outgoing alderman.

WHEN ASKED what he thought of complaints from the State Central Committee that they were being bypassed in the selection of his successor, Mr. Brown answered, "The charges of the committee are without foundation because the authority to fill vacancies rests entirely with the remaining members of the council, according to our code."

As Urban Renewal Authority officer, Mr. Brown's main duty will be to make citizens in the project area aware of the URA program, to get suggestions and incorporate them, when possible, into the framework of the program, he told the AFRO.

When the necessity for relocation arises, Mr. Brown will find housing for both owners and tenants.

Mr. Brown, who introduced and helped pass an unprecedented open housing law, has served on the nine - member council for 16 years.

The other council member, Alderman Roscoe Parker, has represented the Fourth Ward for 14 years.

AS THE column reached the South End, one heckler barged past police and demanded to talk to Barber. Several officers seized him and hustled him into a squad car. Police ordered another man who tried to interfere off the street.

The marchers stopped at St. Augustine's Church, deep in the South End, where about 100 whites shouted at them across a tight police line.

"You were American enough to let us walk down here," Barber said.

"We hope you will be American enough to let us walk back.

"We came here to demonstrate for open housing, but that doesn't mean we want to live here. We just want better housing."

HE THEN led the crowd toward the North End where it had assembled two hours earlier. As the marchers reached a barroom-lined section of Main Street, several whites began shouting "white power." They were immediately dispersed by police.

A similar march was attempted Sept. 18 by the demonstrators but police halted it at the edge of the predominantly colored North End. The incident touched off two nights of rock and bottle throwing — the city's second racial disturbance of the summer.

Friday's march was originally scheduled to end at Mayor George B. Kinsella's home in the South End, but Barber decided to stop instead at the church where he said Msgr. Robert W. Doyle had recently "preached of brotherhood and understanding."

THE 28-YEAR-OLD Barber, wro holds a Master's degree in political science from Yale, told reporters as the procession neared its end: "It was a beautiful demonstration. It was the most dramatic civil rights demonstration in Hartford's history."

He said the caucus plans further demonstrations soon against some of the city's businesses.

"We will take direct action against several companies," he said. "They must realize that what we need requires as massive effore and Hartford has got to make it."

Pratt Library phones ready for callers with questions

The Central Enoch Pratt Free Library inaugurated its expanded TELEPHONE REFERENCE SERVICE for book and quick reference information on Monday, Oct. 2.

The number to call is still 685-6700, but on Monday six ten-station telephones opened for direct access to a staff of two professional librarians and ten library auxiliaries who will answer questions from a collection of over 900 reference books and documents.

Book reserves and whether a book is in the Pratt's collections will also be handled by this service.

TELEPHONE Reference Service will send in writing questions requiring in-depth reference or further book search to subject departments for completion of information and call to patron.

To free 685-6700 exclusively for readers' information requests, beginning October 2, administrative offices must be called on a different number, 837-9100.

Branch library telephone service will continue to be available under the separate listings in the current telephone book.
