Baltimore's Project Go Praised By Visitors From Ariz. And Ill.

Cleves Campbell, a second-term black Senator from Phoenix, Arizona, and Paul Holmes, a black businessman from Chicago who is Director of Youth Motivation for the National Alliance of Businessmen, came to Baltimore Wednesday to observe Project GO (Growing Opportunities).

Mrs. Charlotte Mebane, Co-ordinator of the Project and Henry Carpenter, assistant co-ordinator, guided the visitors and explained the project which is designed for ninth grade boys and girls in Baltimore public schools.

"It is a career development program in which agencies, hospitals and colleges participate to improve the horizons of the boys and girls involved."

Mr. Holmes voiced great enthusiasm for Baltimore's program, "I have been going around the country seeing other programs," he said, "and Baltimore's is structured very well and I'll be using it as a model for cities beginning such programs," he said. Senator Campbell was equally enthusiastic.

* * *

Project GO began in 1968 with the Lombard High School and now has expanded to include 12 high schools, comprising 6000 students, nine hospitals, 76 companies, and 15 colleges.

Senator Campbell, who is also employed as Public Affairs Representative by the light and gas company of Arizona, Arizona Public Service Company, heard about the Baltimore program and, a year ago, began a similar program in Phoenix.

"I practically stole Mrs. Mebane's program. The Arizona Public Service Company sponsored the program. We thought Baltimore's Project GO was so good, that we decided to incorporate it into our city."

* * *

Since the Phoenix project began, Senator Campbell has received requests for information about how to start similar projects from Lexington, Kentucky and Los Angeles, California.

In Chicago, Mr. Holmes directs a program similar to Project GO. "Our jobs program gets employment for minority and disadvantaged people," he explained. "And we have a phase geared for minority and disadvantaged youth. I am in Baltimore to observe project GO and to offer Mrs. Mebane the support of the National Alliance of Businessmen.

"I have visited various cities across the country that have similar projects and I'll be tying them together as far as objectives are concerned."

Co-sponsor of he Baltimore project is the Voluntary Council on Equal Employment Opportunity, is organized around 6 phases.

These include beginning with an introduction to the projects aims, which are to convince students to stay in school and to show them how they can overcome obstacles in the way of achieving employment.

Then the students are given tours of participating companies, where they spend time talking to workers and employees. They are told about apprenticeship programs in industry and opportunities in higher education.

* * *

Finally, the students take part in a job clinic, where they meet personnel officers from different companies and have a chance to sit in on a job interview.

"We think we have gotten good results through the participation of the many companies involved who have provided money, transportation and lunches for the students," said Mrs. Mebane. "We feel the project is a success and the companies feel it is a success.

"We have just graduated our first class this year and we are presently working with the research division of the Baltimore public schools to evaluate the merits of the program."

Senator Campbell's program, modeled exactly after Baltimore's Project GO, involves 2 inner city high schools, 2 hospitals, 2 newspapers, and the Arizona Public Service Co.

HAIL CITY PROGRAM — Visitors to Baltimore on Wednesday this week hailed city school program called Operation Go., left to right, Harry Carpenter, assistant co-ordinator of the program. State Senator Campbell, Phoenix, Arizona, Mrs. Charlotte Mebane, Co-ordinator of the project; and Paul Holmes, Chicago, Director of Youth.

Need meaningful promotions not mere jobs says Glenn

Black Americans are embarking on a new level of involvement, the threshold of which is the most critical period in the history of the race, David L. Glenn, director of Baltimore Community Relations Committee, said, here, Saturday.

Mr. Glenn was speaker at the Founder's Day luncheon of Lambda Kappa Mu Sorority, held in the Sheraton-Baltimore Inn.

The time has come, he told the several hundred women, to think not only of employment but of meaningful promotions, and of involvement on corporate community boards.

* * *

Mr. Glenn told the group that success from now on will require not only basic technique, but a philosophical base from which to make the thrust. Conditioned to think that things will work themselves out is not necessarily so, but there is the need to know how, what, where and with whom the thrust is to be made, he said.

There is need, also, he said for a united black front to study methods of approach, to discuss whether direct action, politics, revolution, law and government action, economic pressure or a coalition of blacks and poor whites, or a combination of any of these will work towards solving the problems.

Mr. Glenn was introduced by Mrs. Dorothy Stone of the sorority. He was recipient, along with Mrs. Grace Hunt, Director of the YWCA of Baltimore, of Community Service awards.

Other participants in the program were Soror Mary Silva, who gave the invocation; Soror Margaret Yates, greetings; Soror Camille Williams, the history of the sorority, composed chiefly of business and professional women; Soror Rosalind Wood, soloist; Sorors Olivia Bates, Imogene B. Douglass, she as a retiree recipient; and Soror Thelma D. Addison, chapter basileus.

The luncheon was arranged by a committee headed by Soror Louise G. Turks, who presided. Soror Camille Williams, co-chairman and Sorors Marion Alston, Olivia Bates, Doris Jackson, Naomi Johnson, Mary Silva, Dorothy Stone, Alma Redden.;

Also Sorors Margaret Yates, Lillian Jones, Kathleen Newsome, Jacqueline Fleming, Arabelle Bass, Marine Beasley and Hattie Williams.
