FROM every section of Kent County comes the most encouraging reports of Democratic harmony and there is no reason, as far as we can see, why the Democrats should not sweep the county in November. The ticket is a most representative one and should please all Democrats, as far as it is possible to please so large a mass of people. There always has been and always will be some who do not get what they want, but this should not affect their party loyalty. The sharp fight over the chief judgeship has, as far as we can learn, left no resentment and a united party is looked for in November.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

(Communicated.)

We are told the 15th of September
To The Chestertown Transcript:
was made a Joy Day by the children of Galena School, marching from the Old School Building to the new. There was much joy with the children, but with the older persons it must have been sad to see the old building used no more. One thing the old building can claim that no other school house in the county can claim: it has had teachers from three generations in one family—Mr. Rodgers, Mrs. Whitaker and her daughter, Miss Mattie. The old building has sent out into the world preachers, doctors, editors, painters, teachers and quite a number of first-class farmers.

It's sad, but true, the old has to give away for the new.

Now let the fathers and mothers of the children see that a good flag pole is put up in the yard. Remember the war.

HOG CHOLERA

County Agent Horace B. Derrick Tells How To Combat The Disease

The present condition of hog cholera in our county is not alarming, but such that much attention should be given to it. Hog cholera is scattered generally all over Kent County and should be a warning to all farmers to innoculate their hogs for protection.

Hog cholera is caused by a very small germ or virus contained in the blood and other fluids of the body and which cannot be isolated by the usual methods of treatment.

The mode of transferring this disease is not definitely known, but it being an infectious disease, it is only reasonable that it is carried by dogs, cats, buzzards, crows, pigeons, in water, by people, horses or wagon wheels, etc. Flies may also be one of the chief carriers of the disease.

General sanitary measures can not be depended upon to ward off the disease, but may prevent it. A clean hog pen or lot that the sunshine can reach daily may kill some germs just brought to a farm where a dirty, filthy, miry, manure-soaked pen may hold the germs and probably multiply them until picked up by hogs. All professional men advise, however, that general sanitary measures be carried out as a means for checking and preventing the disease.

The symptoms of hog cholera are not always very marked, and they vary in intensity in different outbreaks and even in different cases. One set of symptoms may be pronounced in one set of cases while in another set of cases another set of symptoms may predominate. The usual symptoms are dullness and apathy at the start.

There can be no question but that the disposal of the carcasses of all hogs that have died of hog cholera is a most important matter. Every hog cholera carcass should be burned or buried deeply, and in the latter case the carcass should be thickly covered with quick lime before the dirt is shoveled in the pit. But burning is the most efficacious and is easy to do.

The United States government has spent large sums of money to find out all about the disease, how to check it and what is best to do to prevent it. Likewise the several states have done the same. Professional men have tried every remedy, cure and prevention heard of to control hog cholera. The result has been that they have found that innoculation with anti hog cholera serum is the best and almost absolute preventative against the disease. No cure has as yet been found, but the innoculation will help and increase the chances of a diseased hog to live. The time to innoculate is when hog cholera gets anywhere near your neighborhood.
