Hospital gives land for park

The Good Samaritan Hospital has made a tract of land 120 yards wide and 200 yards long at Woodbourne and Hillen Roads available for a community park and playground.

The property, on the eastern end of the Good Samaritan grounds, is being converted for recreation through an agreement with the Perring-Loch Improvement Association.

It will eventually offer athletic fields, playground equipment for children and a picnic area. The closest parks for youngsters in the community to use now are Herring Run and Mount Pleasant, both a good distance away.

NOTICE

This is to publicly state policies that have been in force at the Perring Parkway Nursing Home on or before April 1, 1971. On that date action was taken by the Board of Directors and Owners of Perring Parkway Nursing Home indicating the institution would be open to all patients regardless of race, creed or religion.

Also that employees would be chosen on the basis of Experience and ability rather than race, color, national origin or religion.

This policy was further agreed to at the time of application for the Maryland State License before the institution began operation. (advt.)

'Why don't they?' folder full again

It's time the voice of the housewife was heard in the land — again.

For the "why don't they?" folder is full again, as women continue to voice their suggestions on how manufacturers can improve products and packaging and so increase their sales.

One of the most frequent "why don't they?" complaints involves pantyhose. Not sized, as one housewife puts it, "for us big gals." Or, as another, suggested, why not "manufacture pantyhose in sizes designed to fit women with short legs and large hips?"

Other complaints involve durability. But let it be said that most manufacturers are trying sizing so a woman can elect hose that'll fit to her height and weight, and also are working to improve durability of what has become a staple of the lingerie market.

The man of the house complained the other day his shoes wouldn't stay tied. It turned out the laces are nylon, and as a homemaker had written, the nylon is durable but tends to untie more radily than cotton.

One of my own complaints in the clothing department sounds like women's lib is getting to me. Why do manufacturers put hanging loops in the back of men's coats, but not in women's?

Many of the why don't they suggestions come this way through national family Opinion, Inc., a Toledo, Ohio-based consumer market research firm.

Here are samplings of queries sent in by some of its part-time homemaker-consultants:

Why don't they?

Make a more durable vacuum bottle for children's use. As one mother complained, "The glass liner doesn't last long in a first grade grader's lunch pail."

Make all cups and glasses with flat bottoms, or at least flatten so called "everyday" ware. The bases of many have depressions in them that fill with water when they are washed in the dishwasher.

Save the consumer some money by making pajama tops only for the men who won't sleep in the bottoms, and vice versa. Fortunately for the former group, anyway, you now can buy nightshirts.

Make horizontal button holes on dresses and blouses for farmer closing.

Sell spices in smaller containers. There are so many you seldom use and they get stale on the shelf.

Manufacture bed sheets with top and bottom widths the same. Being able to reverse the sheets should make for longer wear.

Why don't they?

Use less salt in canned vegetables and vegetable juices. It is a simple matter to add salt if wanted at home. But there are low sodium dieters and many regular eaters who don't like the oversalted taste.

Package bacon so you can see all of it, not just the lean parts.

Offer canister sets consisting of only two large canisters. Many people use instant coffee and tea and don't need the two small containers.

Include tea bags or packets of instant tea along with the instant coffee provided for guests in many hotel or motel rooms.

Make certain that detailed instructions for care and cleaning come with wallpapers, in particular the new vinyl tupes.

Offer rubber gloves with an extra right or left hand; the glove more used usually wears out faster.

Pack a few extra envelopes in greeting car boxes for the inevitable addressing errors.

Economy meals for good eating

To softened vanilla ice cream, stir in swirls of canned peach slices and syrup.

Refreeze. Presto! You have delectable Peach Sundae Ice Cream, ready to refresh and delight on a hot day.

Ready-to-serve canned peaches lend themselves to so many warm weather uses. From morning perk-up to luncheon salad to light dinner dessert, peaches are golden-rich and nutritious — providing Vitamin A, several minerals, and energy.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service names canned cling peaches as a Plentiful Food this season. This abundance means canned peaches may be a special purchase at your food market, so look for them next time you shop.

Most peaches are packed according to USDA grade even though tris may not be indicated on the label. Of course, top quality costs more, but all grades are wholesome and have a good taste. The net weight shown on the label includes both fruit and syrup, and the best buys can be determined by figuring the cost per ounce.

• • •

Following are the grades and their meanings.

U. S. Grade A or Fancy — The very best, with an excellent color and uniform size, weight, and shape; of the proper ripeness and with few or no blemishes, fruits of this grade are best for special purpose use where flavor and appearance are important.

U. S. Grade B or Choice — Of very good quality and only slightly less perfect than Grade A; suitable for most uses.

U. S. Grade C or Standard — Not as sweet or as uniform as the higher grades, these fruits are still good and wholesome; useful where color and texture are not important . . . as in puddings, jams, frozen desserts, and baked goods.

If the label on the can lists the number of servings, the law requires that the size of the servings be given in common measures, such as ounces or cups. Two to three peach halves or one-half cup of sliced peaches are generally considered an adult serving. Two adult servings can be obtained from an 8-8½ ounce can, three to four from a 16-17 ounce can, and seven adult servings from a 29 ounce can.

Peach Chiffon Pie is a scrumptious, beautiful dessert that calls for two Plentiful Foods — canned peaches and eggs:

1½ cups canned peaches, crushed, 1 baked pastry shell, 9-inch, 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, 3 egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, ¼ cup lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 egg whites, and ¼ cup sugar.

To prepare: Make pastry shell; cool. Soften gelatin in cold water. Beat egg yolks slightly and add ½ cup sugar and lemon juice. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until thick. Add softened gelatin to hot mixture; stir until dissolved.

Chill until thick but not set. Fold peaches into gelatin mixture. Add salt to egg whites and beat until soft peaks form. Add ¼ cup sugar, beating constantly until stiff. Fold in the gelatin mixture. Pour into pastry shell. Chill until set. (NOTE: Use only clean, sound-shelled eggs in this recipe). Makes 9-inch servings. Calories per serving: About 275.

Colleges losing financial aid

DENMARK, S.C. — Desegregation is causing a serious reduction in enrollment at predominantly black colleges, according to Dr. John F. Potts, executive director of the Triangle Association of Colleges.

He told the 151 graduating seniors at Voorhees College the reduced enrollments have in turn caused a decrease in financial support from the community, the federal and state governments and philanthropy foundations.
