SETON HILL OPEN HOUSE last Sunday had the rainbow hues of the above handmade potetry to enhance the old French Quarter's atmosphere. Display of the wares from his Pot Luck Ceramic Shop on 151 Park Ave., which delas in pottery for the housewife, are Richard Walker and his assistant designer and potter who wore an exclusive frock and matching old French cap. For the AFRO's unique picture story of the historic area located in the home office neighborhood, see the special photo page inside this issue.

'Heart shocks' no help

An attempt by medical science to 'shock back to life'... Miss Zelma Mae McNeil, 900 block W. Biddle St., proved to be [illegible] General Hospital early Tuesday morning.

Dr. Victor Felipa, 38, of the hospital staff reported to police on May 20, Miss McNeil went to the hospital complaining of pains in her chest and shortness of breath.

Upon examination it was found Miss McNeil had pneumonia of the right middle lobe. The patient then suffered [illegible] and was "shocked back to life" and placed in a special care unit.

Early Tuesday, Miss McNeil had another heart arrest and was pronounced dead by Dr. Felipa.

Father of the patient, Clarence Woodfolk, 2700 block E. Preston St., said his daughter had had seizures for the past two years.

Mr. Woodfolk later claimed the body from the Medical Examiner's office where an autopsy will be performed to determine cause of death.

The Seton Hill Association held Open House last weekend to show off its more than 40 homes in the historic section in the vicinity of St. Mary's Seminary on Paca St. just off Druid Hill Ave.

The original French Quarter which dates back to Baltimore of the late 1700's is in the AFRO's home office immediate neighborhood and includes restored row houses at the foot of Druid Hill Ave. on George, Jasper, Paca, Tessier and Monument Sts.

Seton Hill's name comes from the famed Mother Seton House where Mother Elizabeth Seton took her first vows 150 years ago. The house is on Paca St. just off Druid Hill Ave.

Seton Hill was first inhabited by French Catholic priests of the St. Sulpice Order in 1791.

* * *

From about 1680 the area was the 690 acre plantation known as Chatsworth. The Manor House was located near the present Lexington Market where it remained until 1875. The land was divided and sold by 1790.

The interracial group of citizens who have restored the houses has as a guiding principle, "A pleasant, attractive and convenient neighborhood, one which points to hope for many inner city areas."

Featured in the Saturday and Sunday occasion were art exhibits and shows, a Flea Market, plays, organ concert by Dr. Louis A. Sheetz of the Basilica of the Assumption refreshment stand. Thousands of visitors filed through from early afternoon to dusk each day.
