NOLAND

Civilians

We look upon you now, unglorified,
Whose brows but yesterday a halo wore
In all men's eyes; whose youthful shoulders bore,
Like Atlas, the world's weight—yea, even more.
The hope of all the years that are to be.
Upon new heights, you moved heroicly.
And old men watched you and forgot their fears,
Women beheld you through a mist of tears,
And children called to you with ringing cheers.
Must all our glory in you, all our pride,
Pass with the khaki you have laid aside?

Oh, brothers, hear Today's entreating word:
"Though you have left the fierce, inspiring strife
For village calm, or the self-seeking life
Of cities with their Midas longings rife,
Will you not keep the hero heart still yours—
The living faith—the valor that endures?
The Present needs your courage and your might;
Behold, on every hand, new foes to fight,
And grim, primeval wrongs that war with Right.
Though gun be spiked, and sheathed the blood-dyed sword,
Forever sounds the bugle of the Lord."

St. John's Vs. Washington College Today.—One of the biggest athletic events of the year will take place on Washington Field today, Saturday, beginning at 3 p. m., when Washington College and St. John's meet in the annual football contest, which is the first football game on the Washington College Field in two years. This game will also mark another epoch in the athletics of the institution in the return to the coaching line of Captain (Coach) J. Thomas Kibler, who saw considerable active service on the battlefields of Europe. What Coach Kibler has done for the athletics of Washington College is known to all. There never was a better coach at the old institution than the genial and popular Captain Kibler, and if his speedy, light young team can bring home the laurels to W. C., after a training that has lasted but two weeks, it will not only be a big thing for athletics at the college, but will also be a tribute to the coach's ability to handle young material. We won't make any prediction as to the result, because we don't know anything about St. John's team, but one thing we do know—that the W. C. team will give a good account of itself Saturday afternoon.

Who was it said "a kit of tools
Was made for wise men, not for —others."

THE right tool at the right time is about as important as the necessary collar button. The autoist who shows wisdom sees to it that he has a tool for each possible contingency and he knows that this supply shop is the auto owner's reasonable rendezvous.
