Nance vows land use for homes

One of the youngest Democratic candidates for City Council is Alfred Nance, 23 of the 2nd District.

Mr. Nance says, "As a city councilman, I will ask that a total be published of all the land held by the Major and City Council, especially those that are proposed for construction; where construction has not begun and has been vacant for at least one year.

"This will avoid future waste of vast amounts of usable land'" Mr. Nance explains, "and at the same time help to provide land to build homes for our citizens.

"For every five housing units torn down," he continues, "there is one built, when there is a need for 10,000 houses in Baltimore."

• • •

Among other concerns of the youthful candidate are the problems of drugs, crime, education, sanitation and the lack of black representation in council chambers.

Mr. Nance concludes, "My hope is to offer an alternative to voters of the 2nd District — a district clearly neglected in City Council."

A graduate of Community College of Baltimore and Loyola College, he is an insurance underwriter with Mutual of New York Life Insurance Company.

He holds membership in the National Life Underwriter's Association Baltimore Life Underwriter's Association, New Democratic Club, Maryland Conference of Social Welfare, Ad Hoc Committee Studying Discriminatory Practices and Federal Compliance, Small Businessmen's League, NAACP and Mutual of New York Honor Club.

Dwight Crist Northington, 2924 Winchester St. has completed Project Boost, a new Navy program, and will be attending Prairie View A and M College of Texas in August on a four year scholarship, as an ROTC College Scholarship Program student.

Mr. Northington is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Northington. He is a 1969 graduate of Forest Park High School. After graduation Mr. Northington enlisted in the Navy.

After enlisting, he was taken from his active duties and placed in the Naval Academy Prep School in Bainbridge, Md. in September, 1970 where he completed the course in may, 1971.

Mr. Northington will be enlisted in the U.S. Naval Reserve and be sworn in as a Midshipman, Naval Reserve at Prairie View.

As a student, the Navy will pay his tuition, books, and fees, and will also pay travel expenses back and forth from Prairie View to Baltimore.

• • •

Project Boost is now a full pledge program that has been moved to San Diego, California. It was renamed the Boost Program.

Upon entering the program, the applicant has three options. He can enter in the Naval Science Engineering Program (NESEP), the Naval Academy or the NROTC.

The Boost Program is designed to broaden opportunities for officer selective training.

Navy recruiting stations have all the information needed to get into the program.

Interracial couple freed of charges by whites

By PAUL EVANS

ELLICOTT CITY — July 21 — After days-long testimony by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sulton, an interracial couple, who served as their own counsel, Judge James MacGill ruled here in Howard County Circuit Court that they had not violated an injunction which he had placed against them last year at the request of nine young adult neighbors.

The neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wood and Mrs. Frank Schoen of Reid Circle, Fort Washington Estates, Md., had sought the injunction which forbids the Sultons to "harass and disturb" them because of alleged noises and disturbances perpetrated by the Sultons during a period of six years since they moved to the complex located in Prince Georges County.

• • •

The magistrate reserved for further study and reconsideration of a request by two of the Sultons other neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rudnick and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Shock, that they be included in the injunction.

The contention by the Sultons that the Rudnicks and the Shocks could not be included in the injunction was a point to which they consistently held as the trial proceeded.

Appearing as plaintiff today was Ernest Wood who contended the Sultons, particularly Mrs. Sulton, had disturbed his family and the general peace of the neighborhood.

The plaintiff's defense attorney, Ronald Willoner of College Park, called Mr. and Mrs. Rudnick and Mr. Wood to testify on their complaints of disturbances.

A point held by Mr. and Mrs. Rudnick, centered on the Sultons' son, Jacques, whom their attorney said attempted to enter the home of he Rudnicks late one night last May.

The Sultons refuted this point time and time again by requesting ile detector tests for themselves and the Rudnicks.

• • •

Serving in their own defense, the couple repeatedly asked the Rudnicks and Mr. Wood to cite a single case of bodily harm against them.

While he could not do so, Mr. Rudnick contended, "My wife's hysteria has been a direct result of you," to the couple.

The Rudnicks repeatedly contended that the Sultons had threatened to kill them, with statements as: "I'll do you in. This time I'll get you."

The white couple said they had sold their home on Tuesday night as a direct result of the Sultons.

Mr. Sulton told the AFRO, "If we weren't an interracial couple there would be no problem."

• • •

Mrs. Sulton cross-examining Mrs. Rudnick asked, "Do you think if we moved away from the neighborhood it would help to relax you?" The answer was, "Yes, I think it would."

Asking that the entire case be dismissed, the couple said the incidents which the plaintiff described "were the results of everyday living."

Repeatedly the defense attorney attempted to infer that the Sultons were attempting to harass the entire neighborhood and said they had driven one family away.

This was vehemently rebutted by Mrs. Sulton who told the court that the neighbor who had moved away did so because she is said to have disliked the alleged discriminatory nature of the neighborhood.

The stout white woman said, "she told me they were at a party two years ago when someone said, 'Let's make that mixed couple move. And, if you don't help us, we'll do the same thing to you."

• • •

Both husband and wife said the whole trial was a conspiracy which involved their neighbors, the Prince Georges County government, the state of Maryland and the Federal Government.

Again, the Sultons asked for lie detectors tests. The Rudnicks and Mr. Wood refused to answer when questioned by Mrs. Sulton if they, too, would take the tests.

Questioned by the defense attorney, Mr. Sulton was asked, "Do you think your neighbors are prejudiced"? He answered, "Yes."

Ending her plea Mrs. Sulton said, "If everybody would keep quiet and mind their own business, it would be a nice neighborhood. It is a conspiracy of neighbors who want us out. It's not gonna work."

Judge MacGill is expected to render a decision sometime in August on the request by the Rudnicks and the Shocks that they be included within the injunction.

No therapy possible in 'The Hole'

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

JESSUP, Md. — Dr. Brian Crowley, a psychiatrist and psychoanalyst in Bethesda, Md., testified that Patuxent Institution doesn't adhere to the philosophy that it proclaims, that of being a rehabilitative center for hard-core criminals.

Dr. Crowley visited the L-1 (the hole) and M-1 lockup before testifying Thursday morning.

In regard to L-1, he said: "By the time everything (the doors) is shut, you're in total darkness with poor ventilation. I found myself becoming panicky and claustrophobic."

Called as a witness for the Patuxent 13, Dr. Crowley testified before Judge Robert B. Watts, Baltimore City Supreme Bench and Judges H. Ralph Miller of the Montgomery County Circuit Court, who are hearing charges of brutal and dehumanizing treatment at Patuxent.

They were appointed by Md. Court of Appeals Chief

Mandel meets on Pomerleau Tuesday

Gov. Marvin Mandel will meet with representatives of the black community here 3 p.m. Tuesday, on issues surrounding police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau.

The meeting will be held in the governor's reception room in the State Office Building, 300 block W. Preston St.

Frank A. DeFilippo, Gov. Mandel's executive press officer, said Thursday:

"The meeting was set up at the request of Troy Brailey (4th District delegate) who called me personally, and I arranged it with the governor.

"That's about all there is to it."

Police comb city for petite girl

By PAMELA M. JASPER

"Oh God just bury me, please God," said a grieving mother who was perhaps in her late 30's, as she told this reporter of her missing daughter.

As she weeped, she softly uttered a story she had told the police, her friends, family and neighbors only two days before.

Mrs. Margaret Leach, 4116 Glen Hunt Rd., was speaking of her 13-year-old daughter, Karen Denise Little, who suddenly and mysteriously disappeared Monday from the backyard of their Edmondson Village home where she was playing.

Neighbors report they had seen the teenager on the premises that morning but didn't see her that afternoon. They thought she was inside the house.

Mrs. Leach, an employee at Eastern Products, said her "baby" who is the only child, stays at home, alone, during the day.

When she returned home from work at 4:40 p.m., she found the front and back doors open. Karen was nowhere to be found.

She immediately contacted the neighbors who said they hadn't seen her during the afternoon. She then called the police.

They rushed to her home and took a missing persons report.

Karen, a recent graduate of Ronald Heights Elementary School, No. 89, is scheduled to begin junior high school studies at Calverton Heights this fall.

A lifetime member at Morning Star Baptist Church, she is a Girl Scout.

Well-liked in the Edmondson Village area, church and school, the lost youngster is known as a very "sweet" child.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Karen Denise Little who suddenly disappeared from her 4116 Glen Hunt Rd. home, is urged to contact the Southwestern Police station immediately.

Sen. Mitchell 'very much' in the race

"It's ridiculous. He's still very much in the race."

This was Congressman Parren Mitchell's reply to the AFRO's question after reliable sources said his nephew, State Senator Clarence Mitchell III, had plans to withdraw from the race for mayor of Baltimore.

Also on Thursday evening, State Sen. Mitchell himself told AFRO, "No indeed. The rumor is false. I have no intentions of withdrawing."

Dad is daily trial visitor

The Rev. Eugene T. Grove Sr. has kept a week-long vigil on proceedings at the Patuxent Institution, where his son Eugene Grove Jr., is one of the Patuxent 13.

Father of seven children, three daughters and four sons, the Rev. Mr. Grove is a measure of consolation to his son and the other inmates who are bringing charges against the state for "brutal and dehumanizing treatment" at the institution.

With handcuffs occasionally still on, they raise their arms in the black power salute, and say "Hi," as the Rev. Mr. Grove sits in the back of the hearing room.

When his son asked for his wristwatch, his father told this reporter, "What's a watch? Eugene already has my heart-strings."

(Read Rev. Grove's letter in Tuesday's AFRO. It's a tear-jerker. Editor's note.)

Fraser twins rest in the same grave

The Rev. Thomas P. Fraser and his twin sister now rest together in the same grave in Arbutus Memorial Park.

Both died within the last six weeks, of epileptic seizures.

The Rev. Mr. Fraser died when he fell 85 feet from the balcony of his apartment in Paterson, N.J., where he was due to take over the pulpit of a new church that coming Sunday.

He was buried in Arbutus on June 8.

His sister, Mrs. Stephanie Fraser Martin, was buried after last rites today (Friday).

The funeral services were held at the Rev. Mr. Fraser's old church, Trinity Presbyterian Church, 3200 Walbrook Ave. He was pastor there 12 years and his last rites were held there.

• • •

According to her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Fraser, Mrs. Martin had been in fairly good health since her twin brother's death, June 4, but had recently experienced some difficulty in breathing.

Mrs. Martin, assistant professor and librarian at Coppin State College for eight years, was a product of Morgan State College. She obtained a master of science degree in library science from Simmons College and completed additional graduate studies at the University of Utah.

For five years, she worked as the children's librarian at the Enoch Pratt Library, and then moved to Washington, D.C., where she worked as librarian at Howard University.

Mrs. Martin established an early reputation as a "story teller." She represented the United States as a "story teller" at the International Story-Telling Festival in Miami in 1958.

At the time of her death, she was working on a manuscript titled, "The Art of Story-Telling to Black Children."

In addition, she developed a prototype course in children's literature at Coppin. A phase of this work involved scheduling students to participate in schools by telling stories.

She was recently promoted to assistant professor of English with major responsibility for freshman English and children's literature. She also held membership in a number of learned societies including the National Council of Teachers of English, American Library Association and was listed in Who's Who in Library Science.

A native of Dayton, Ohio, Mrs. Martin moved to Baltimore in 1950 after her father took a professorship at Morgan State College.

In addition to her parents, Mrs. Martin is survived by a son, William Fraser Martin of Washington and a sister, Mrs. Dolores Cave of Philadelphia.

Northern may be 1,400 beyond its capacity

By PAUL EVANS

Some 1,100 students are expected to attend Northern High School in September as 10th graders.

Northern officials said on Wednesday that phone calls were made to those parents who had not responded to a letter sent out by the Department of Education.

With the unexpected additional 1100 students, total student body population for the new school term is expected to be 3,800 which is 1400 above normal capacity of the building.

The additional burden on school facilities was brought about by a ruling from the Board of School Commissioners which reversed an earlier decision that shifted Northern's entire tenth grade to Lake Clifton High School.

• • •

Commissioners ruled students affiliated Lake Clifton for the tenth grade would be considered Northern students and would be guaranteed entrance into Northern for the eleventh and twelfth grades.

Groups of mostly white parents attended a recent meeting of the Board and brought considerable pressure to bear on the officials to allow students to return to Northern inspite of the fact they knew the building would be overcrowded.

At the board meeting which announced the reversal of the decision, Commissioners Kalman Hettleman and Larry S. Gibson argued that racial exploitation of the issue had been involved in the decision of

Brailey's 'No Booze Sunday' Movement turns into women's Revolution here

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

It's not the Women's Lib sort of thing Delegate Troy Brailey has started with his coming General Assembly Bill to ban sale of liquor during church hours on Sundays.

It's just a big group of housewives, women preachers and church members who feel he is right. They're the independent ones who have sprouted up overnight to rally to the cause.

Since the Tuesday AFRO published the "No Booze Sunday" story on the 300 calls he had received up to that date, Mr. Brailey states that his phone has not stopped ringing. Before the weekend's over he estimates the count will be way over 600.

"They're getting together, I don't know how many," he told this reporter Thursday, "and they are going ahead with it.

"They tell me by January when the General Assembly meets, they're going to pack the State House down in Annapolis."

• • •

One lady preacher says her whole church is coming to the proposed public hearings scheduled by Mr. Brailey for some time before the bill is put before the body.

Another jolly, clever and quite firm housewife vows "every married woman I know is getting into it."

All, Mr. Brailey states, seem interested in expanding his bill proposal for no sales of liquor from 2 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sundays to "All the hole day, right straight up to 6 a.m. Monday."

As expected the zealous ladies have told Mr. Brailey over the phone, "We wish you could cut it out all the time, seven days a week."

Many of them predict if drinking were abandoned crime would go down, children would have good examples to follow and home-life would become happier.

Now, the ladies admit some of their claim "indulge."

They state, "Yes; the girls too. Some of them go down a few too many clickers too. If we could cut the whole business out, maybe we would get them in church."

Mr. Brailey states that his primary purpose in wanting bars and taverns and package goods stores closed during church hours is not for the sake of the ladies and gentlemen too who would like late passage on the sidewalk on the way to worship.

He's quite hopeful also that the few hours respite will show that crime can thus be reduced.

Mr. Brailey notes that bars and package goods stores are open 140 hours a week, 20 hours a day and longer than any other merchants in town. The 6 a.m.-to-1 p.m. Sunday hours are the most crowded hours, he finds.
