IT WAS A GOOD SUMMER, the Summer of '71 when this cute little girl, Doris Davis, played in the fountain at Druid Hill Park pool and Isaac Grove of Pasadena was rewarded with 15 vineyards loaded with bushels of blue and whit grapes and Eric Dixon and his mother, Mrs. Florence Dixon, No. 46 Morely Ave., had yard-long, running green beans in the garden and she and her husband James Dixon, a freight handler, caught over 50 lirage fish at a time each day they took a trip to Dundalk waters. Mr. Dixon, "an old fisherman" stacks them in the freezer. Mrs. Dixon says, "I love to pull them out the water."

Man charged twice with same murder

By M. BERNARDINE MYLES

Criminal Court Judge Solomon Liss ruled Thursday that the trial of a man held twice on the same murder charge, must be conducted and disposed of on the same day, within three weeks.

The defendant, Richard P. Jefferies, 100 block N. Broadway, was first arrested on April 1, and charged with the murder of Alfonso E. Lowery, Mr. Lowery, 22, died of stab wounds on March 30.

Mr. Jefferies, 26, appeared for trial on Aug. 12 before Criminal Court Judge Gilbert Prendergast, at which time the state refused to prosecute because it was unable to produce a witress and subsequently had insufficient evidence.

The defendant Jefferies was then released from jail (on Aug. 12) where he had been held without bail, since April 1.

However, on the following day, Aug. 13, Mr. Jefferies was re-arrested, and held without bail again in the city jail. He was again charged with the murder of Mr. Lowery.

On Aug. 14, it was determined at Central Municipal Court Mr. Jefferies would be held for a preliminary hearing scheduled on Oct. 11 in the criminal court.

According to the defense attorney, Steven Harris, the state is attempting to harrass Mr. Jefferies and does not have sufficient evidence to convict him.

However, Judge Solomon Liss refused in the Thursday hearing to consider what he termed, "technicalities" involved concerning the substantiality of the state's evidence.

Judge Liss ordered the state to assign the case for trial within three weeks, before Sept. 16.

He stated, There is no point in a preliminary hearing since the defense attorney Harris is ready to proceed.

"Either the defendant is innocent or guilty of the charges. The case ought to be tried on its merits."

Mr. Jefferies is now being held in the city jail without bail until the time of his next trial, which will be held by Sept. 16.

MURDER CHARGES

Harrington trial moved to county

Donald Harrington, son of the late prominent Baptist minister, the Rev. S. A. Harrington, will go on trial in Howard County the last of October on the indictment charging him with the 1970 slaying of Rudolph Lancaster.

The trial was removed from Baltimore Criminal Court at the request of the defense and following the first March 30 trial here.

A jury sitting before Judge James Murphy could not come to a decision and a mistrial was declared.

Last week Harrington filed an appeal in an unrelated case after he was sentenced in Friday, Aug. 13 by Criminal Court Judge Charles D. Harris to five years in prison and fined $5,000 for lottery law violations in 1970.

He faces other charges of narcotics violations and is free on $15,000 bail.

During the time Harrington was indicted for murder and the lottery charges he identified himself as manager of the Club Astoria.

In testimony before Judge Harris and a jury at the recent lottery trial, raiding vice squad officers reported that the Dec. 7,

HUD approves $811,812 grant for Echo House

A grant of $811,812 has been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the Echo House multi-purpose center.

The center will consist of a half-way house for alcoholics, day care facilities, a culture center, health service offices and a social services center.

The new center will be the result of the rehabilitation of five buildings, all within a three block radius of Echo House.

The neighborhood organization that is supervising the plans, Worker Allied Toward Community Unity, also acted as recipient of the grant.

Near 1,000 in 'No Booze' movement

The "No Booze Sunday Movement" now numbers its advocates close to 1,000 persons, mostly women volunteers, Delegate Troy Brailey states.

Among interracial members are congregations of 15 churches; the Baptist Ministers Conference led by the Rev. W. A. Hall, president; women preachers; members of the Order of Eastern Star (Masonic); Missionary Societies, Labor Union officials and many men and women from all walks of life between here and Annapolis where they plan to pack the state House hearings this winter.

Latest development is word from persons outside of Baltimore who expressed belief the proposed bill to ban sale of liquor during church hours Sundays.

Mr. Brailey's bill has been pre-filed in the General Assembly and is numbered PSB-35.

The hoped-for legislation would prohibit bars, taverns, night clubs and package stores from opening doors for business between 2 a.m. and 1 p.m. Sundays.

2 razor blades discovered in hair of inmate

Deputy State's Attorney Benjamin Brown has announced that he will investigate the discovery of two razor blades which were concealed in the bush-styled hair of a Patuxent inmate.

The finding was made as prisoner James Stokes was brought to the courthouse to testify as a witness for a fellow inmate.

Stokes denied any knowledge of the blades when Charles Dorsey, a guard, made the discovery.

Stokes was sent to Patuxent in 1949, after being sentenced to 40 years for armed robbery.

Business groups here score Nixon's economic policy

Representatives of several black business oriented organizations reacted today to President Nixon's "New National Economic Policy." They expressed concern about —

(1) rising high rate of unemployment;

(2) inflation and the falling purchasing power of the dollar;

3) high taxes and rising budget deficit, especially at the national and local levels;

(4) rising deficit in the U.S. balance of payments and declining position of the dollar in international trade.

The group, composed of representatives from the Businessmen's League of Baltimore, Inc.; The Na- Frontiers International, and the Chi Psi Sigma (Business) Fraternity, scored the President for his delay in acting to check the worsening economic situation in the national economy.

The representatives of the black business organizations agree with the direction and the intent of the New National Economic Policy.

Their serious disagreement is on the weak and indirect (if any) favorable effects of particular parts of the new policy on

BRUCE BAILEY

They will miss him at school. Bruce was killed instantly when the car his mother was driving was involved in a four-car accident on July 31.

School 64 won't be the same without him

When school opens on Tuesday, Sept. 7, there will be a vacant seat in a sixth grade room at School No. 64.

It was to have been occupied by 10-year-old Bruce Bailey whom associates described as "one of the finest boys we have ever had."

Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, counselar at the school, recalls "Bruce was well-liked and very well-behaved. He was simply a delightful child who was always willing to help out. He was a leader in the school."

It has been suggested to Mrs. Williams by another faculty to member at the school purchase books for its library and dedicate them to the memory of young Bruce.

This idea will be presented when school convenes on September 1st.

Bruce was killed instantly when the car his mother was driving was involved in a four-car accident at the intersection of Northern Parkway and Wabash Ave., July 31.

Meantime his mother, Mrs. Carolyn Bailey, is in fair condition at Sinai Hospital.

Bruce is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Bailey; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bailey, and Mrs. Ellen Powel and Fred Whiting, all of Baltimore.

Baltimore, Capital Yachts in fabulous Jersey Rendezvons

with Lula Mackay

Eighteen boats of the fabulous Neptune and Seafarers Yacht Clubs sailed off a Saturday morning ago for a rende zvous in Wildwood and a week of fine fun at a New Jersey shore. Twas a beau tiful early morn, 7:30 to be exact, when they cruised out of Annapolis to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, down the Delaware River to Delaware Bay to Cape May Canal and to Wildwood, where they docked for the night, and uncorked for revelry.

Sunday morning they sailed through Cape May inlet to the Atlantic Ocean and into the Atlantic City Marina, where they remained for the week.

Yachts making the trip included:

The Eva, Capt. Ellsworth Randall; The Gem, Capt. George Murray; The DoJo II, Capt. Joseph Barr; The Helen B, Capt. Albert Burwell; The Alanna, Capt. P. B. Taylor; "The Ronnie P.," Capt. Ronald Patterson; "The Why Not, Capt. Roland Williams; The Ruthie M, Capt. Nelson Jackson; The Miss Lynne, Capt. Joe Saunders; and The Harsue, Capt. Harry Southall, all Seafarers;

And Capt. Wallace Hall, commodore of the Neptune Club, and who owns the "Addie V"; Capt. Carl White, and his "Shangrila"; Captains Arvin M. Bradford, Haywood Burrell Jr., Edward L. Feggans, James H. Whitley, Milford Wilson, William Brown and Chaplain Dungee.

All carried guests.

Other club members went down by car and stayed at the Marina Motel — from which they enjoyed the night clubs, the Board Walk, the race track, and boat and pier parties. Also there were the Hobson Reynoldses with their boat "The Evelyn." And on hand at the same time and place were eight boats from the Neptune Club.

Other navigator news in the nonce includes induction of Flotella 71, the past week.

Flotella 75 is a Coast Guard auxiliary which promotes safe boating, boating edulation, and search and rescue missions and trained by D.C.P. Sidney Munitz. The auxiliary members were sworn in Tuesday evening by D.C.P.O. Alvin Johnson at the Seafarers' Club House in Annapolis.

Receiving the oath of office were Albert Burwell, Edward Feggans, Mrs. Helen Burwell, Kenneth O. Wilson, Mrs. Jean Wilson, Joseph Barr, George Murray, Virgil Dolphin, Irvin Henry, Mrs. Edith Henry, Albert Burwell Jr., Melford Wilson, Wendall Gardner, William Chandler, Joe Saunders, Tom Southall, H. B. Burrell.

Dr Burwell was unanimously elected commander of Flotilla 75. Mr. Feggans became vice commander. They were inducted by NACO Harry Osborne, and presented flags of office by DCP VII Sidney Munitz.

Guests included:

Messrs. and Mesdames Allen Stratton, Alvin Johnson, Sidney Munitz, Edward Hutchinson, Eric Swarthe, Phillip Lommis;

Pete Marini, William Wise, Edward Spearman, Lee Isaacson and Lt. Maxi Berry.

Dr. Robertson 'doing better'

RICHMOND

Dr. Benjamin W. Robertson has delayed his return to the pulpit for another two weeks on the advice of his doctor, but he said this week he is "doing better" and feels strong.

Dr. Robertson was released from the hospital last week after treatment for a bleeding ulcer and had hoped to preach on Sunday. His hospitalization sparked a series of rumors as to the cause of his illness, including one that he had been shot.
