Elvin Hayes paces forwards in balloting

2 Bullets among NBA All-Star vote leaders

Two members of the Washington Bullets—Elvin Hayes and Wes Unseld—are among the leading vote-getters in fan balloting for the National Basketball Association All-Star Game at Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 14.

In all, 19 blacks are included in the top 26 picks in first returns.

They are Jo Jo White and Paul Silas of Boston, Walt Frazier and Earl Monroe of New York, Bob McAdoo of Buffalo, and Lou Hudson of Atlanta.

Also Bob Lanier and Dave Bing of Detroit, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Milwaukee, Lucius Allen and Connie Hawkins of Los Angeles, Charlie Scott of Phoenix, Spencer Haywood of Seattle, Nate Thurmond and Bob Love of Chicago, Sidney Wicks of Portland, and Nate Archibald of Kansas City-Omaha.

Ballot nights are being held in all NBA cities and the vote, though preliminary at this early stage in the season, is expected to accelerate in the coming weeks.

Fans are invited to vote as often as they like, and if their choice is not among the 85 names on the ballot, a write-in provision is available.

Haywood makes living playing street chess

NEW YORK — Bobby Haywood, 37, a former boxer and convict, supports himself by playing all comers—for whatever stakes they like—in as many games of chess as they would like to play.

His chess parlor is usually set up on a corner of Eighth Avenue between 42nd and 43rd Sts.

"I play everybody that comes by and wants to play. I don't care how good they are. No one's game can stay steady — it must improve if you play a lot," he said.

"I was playing out here one night, he said, "with a fellow—to be quite honest with you, he's a pimp—and he lost two $50 games, and then he tried to show off in front of his girls, and I wound up winning $400."

Even cold weather doesn't stop Haywood's business. But policemen don't like the crowds he draws.

"There's one thing about New York," Haywood said, "people are walking down the street, and they see somebody stopped and watching something, what do they do?

"They stop too, even if they don't play chess.

"Pretty soon you've got a crowd of 50, 100, people sometimes, all spilling out into the streets, watching the game. The cops come up and say, 'Take it to the park.

"Now who am I going to find to play chess in Bryant Park at night,' he said.

Ali on hand for farcical Bugner victory

LONDON (UPI) — With Muhammad Ali at the ringside looking him over as a possible opponent, European heavyweight champion Joe Bugner Tuesday night stopped Alberto Santiago Lovell of Argentina in the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

Referee Roland Dakin stopped the fight at 2:15 of the round amid a shower of bottles, coins, oranges and programs hurtling into the ring from jeering fans.

The Argentinian tried to wrestle Bugner from the opening bell and went down to a punch that never landed. Grappling once more he held on until Dakin pulled them apart and then he went flat on his back, his arms and legs in the air.

Bugner cut Lovell's left eye early in the second round and then landed the only good punch of the fight, a left hook, that put Lovell down for a count of four.

Amid the shower of missiles, booing and catcalling, Dakin sent Lovell back to his corner when he got up from the count and pinned Bugner's arms.

A veteran boxing reporter called it "one of the most disgraceful exhibitions ever seen in a British boxing ring." Officials at the ringside said there would likely be an official investigation by the British Boxing Board of Control.

CCB student paper gets keen, resourceful editor

By Dr. Sidney Kobre

A 38-year-old mother of six, Mrs. Ruth Redd is appointed editor of the College Crier, the weekly CCB student newspaper. Her daughter, Carolyn, 18, is a sophomore at the college.

Energetic and youthful-looking, Mrs. Redd is seeking to strengthen the newspaper and have it reflect the interests of all the students.

"I believe we ought to print not only news of the activities of students, faculty and administration, but the opinions of students on current college issues," she said.

"Besides, the paper should give expression to students' literary abilities." CCB does not have a literary magazine.

Mrs. Redd has two associate editors, Gloria Sills and Gerald Kelly, and a sports editor, Artis Wright.

Editor Redd has a strong interest in poetry. Last year she won first place in the college poetry contest.

She has written two books of poetry, "Letters to a Black Man" and "Me." As a parent, her thoughts naturally turn toward children, hence her verse often centers around such titles as "The Needs of Children," "Being a Mother" and "Self-awareness."

She conducts in the college recreation room a poetry-reading session on alternate Wednesdays and Thursdays, when she and others try to stimulate student interest in verse reading and writing.

A graduate of Dunbar High School, class of 1955, Mrs. Redd became a licensed practical nurse. She obtained her education at the Community College of Baltimore, graduating with the Associate in Arts degree.

Now she is taking additional courses at CCB, preparatory to continuing her education at another institution, as additional credits and special courses are required for entrance.

"I am particularly interested in psychology and want to do work in learning centers to help others."

she explained.

Her husband, Richard, Wo... in the production department at the Bethlehem Steel Co., and her children range in age from 10 to 18 years. When asked how she managed to take care of her family, attend college and edit the newspaper, she replied, "It's all in organizing. You know what you want to do, and you organize your time around these objectives."

Mrs. Redd reaches her East Baltimore home about 3:30 in the afternoon, in time to greet her youngest children, Richard, 10, May, 12, and Toni, 13, just returning from school. Her other children are Christy, 15, and Shirley, 16.

She helps the children with their schoolwork, then studiess along with daughter Carolyn, the other Redd student at CCB.
