CONSUMER CORNER

Too Hot to Cook

When it's almost too hot to eat, serve a sandwich for dinner. Easy, cheap, delicious, cool, quick, and nutritious, sandwiches are the ultimate convenience food for eater and cook alike.

Years ago Dagwood taught us that anything goes on bread. Today we use long rolls; names like hero, hoagie, sub, or grinder; and oil-in-place-of-the-Dagwood remain great taste and very full mouths and bellies.

Fillings include almost any deli item, hamburgers or other hot or cold meat, poultry, cheese, fish, eggs or beans. For surprise elements try grated cheese, slices of pickle, cucumber, pepper, potato and even peach, banana and orange (with cream cheese and/or peanut butter). Russian dressing, cole slaw, raw spinach leaves, and sauerkraut. A well filled sandwich will cure overheated tempers, kitchens and budgets all at the same time.
