D.C. School Board prexy loses election

By Stephen E. Colter
AFRO Staff Writer

WASHINGTON

Three incumbents were returned to their ward seats, the at-large-seat was retained by an incubent, the former president of the school board was unseated in her race for a ward seat, and nearly 250,000 registered voters did not vote—that's the way it was on Election Day, Nov. 4

It was a very predictable turnout for the most part, with the exception of the ward one seat, which was up for grabs. The former school board ward one representative did not run for re-election.

Things went rather smoothly as far as the ballot counting and tallying procedures, and there weren't many complications.

The first results of the morning ballots, which came about 8 p.m. told the story and set the pattern for the rest of the election.

In that first tally, Elizabeth Kane, the at-large winner led her nearest opponent by more than 4,000 votes. Conrad Smith led the Ward one race by approximately 50 votes.

Hilda Mason was nearly 500 votes past her nearest opponent in Ward four, John Warren, was about 300 votes ahead of his adversary in Ward six, and James Featherstone was upsetting Virginia Morris by 200 votes in Ward seven.

The first Ward five tally, didn't come until 9:15 p.m. because the gyrex machines which were counting the votes were located in the wards. Those results showed Bettie Benjamin leading the nearest candidate by just over 100 votes, with three precincts being recounted.

Those leading candidates remained in the lead for the rest of the election, most of them increasing their leads by large margins.

When it was all over incumbent Bettie Kane, had swept the at-large race with nearly 13,000 votes more than her nearest opponent.

Now the only newcomer to the board, Conrad Smith led the nearest runner-up in Ward one by a mere 200 votes. Hilda Mason finished better than 10,000 votes ahead of her competition to remain a board member.

A strong competitor in Ward five, Leaford Williams fell victim to board member Bettie Benjamin by a slim 285 votes. Prosizemore board member John Warren, despite his troubles with the election board, crashed through Ward six in fly-in colors, carrying 11 of the 16 precincts.

The real upset came in the Ward seven race where former school board president Virginia Morris fell short of the necessary votes to defeat her opponent James Featherstone.

Featherstone had mustered 1,958 votes, or 44.5 percent of the votes compared to Virginia Morris' 1,129 or 25.6 percent. Featerstone carried 17 of the 21 precincts, while Morris carried only one.

Featherstone, whose brother died in a car explosion off of Maryland Eastern Shore that was reportedly rigged to kill then militant activist H. Rap Brown, was confident of his victory early-on in the election.

General feelings were that Morris' defeat was due to her extensive involvement in school board matters as its president, a post she assumed when Marion Barry left for the city council election.

With a serious look on his face, and just the early ballots having been counted, Featherstone gave his reasons for the soon-to-be-official victory over Morris. "I've talked about very definite definitions of the board and priorities meeting the needs of the children under the jurisdiction of the law in the city."

He said that comments on whether the Sizemore affair hurt Morris' chances for re-election should come from her, but that, "It certainly sharpened the focus on the school board race and it may have heightened the interest.

Not certain at that point whether he would in fact be the new Ward seven representative on the board, Feathersone said rather quaintly, "It's certainly a giant step in the right direction."

Having suffered a seemingly bitter defeat at the hands of Elizabeth Kane, Ab Jordan, offered that the lack of participation on the part of grass roots people was a contributing factor in the at-large race.

Jordan, who ended up with 35.5 percent compared to 21.8 percent in Ward eight for Kane, stated, "We couldn't have done any better with the campaign—we did everything we could...What we have to do is to make the brothers and sisters understand that in order to change things they have to come out and cast that ballot."

The overall turn out of voters throughout the various wards and precincts was low. According to the Board of Elections and Ethics, there were 275,308 registered voters with only 26,793 participation in the election.

A closer analysis reveals that for the most part the voters who did vote in the wards where there were ward candidates in addition to the at-large runners did not vote for at-large candidates.

Such figures appear to indicate that there was a failure in communications on the part of the at large candidates, as opposed to the familiarity with the on the part of the at-large encountered by children who had to cross 33rd St. Mr. Holmes' letter says his staff investigated the matter and found numerous traffic lights at the intersection of 33rd and Ellerslie Ave.

The School Board says the letter does not add any new dimension to the desegregation efforts for elementary schools, but merely confirms the position taken by HEW representatives at the Aug. 4 preliminary hearings.

The hearing, a federal attempt to cut off more than $20 million in federal school aid to Baltimore, which adjourned after one day of testimony, is scheduled to resume next Monday and Tuesday at Social Security headquarters in Woodlawn.

IN MEMORIAM

BREWER — In loving memory of our loved one SIDNEY BREWER, Born December 27, 1933, who passed away November 2, 1974.
One long year has passed now,
If we had seen you to the last
And held your dying hand,
And heard the last sigh
From your heart, we would not feel so bad
We did not know the pain you had,
We did not see you die
We only know you went far away,
It's not ours to know the reason why,
It's the Master's way manswered
Are our prayers
But ours to wait for God's own time
To lift the cross we bear
Not ours to know the reason why,
When loved ones from us part,
But ours to live in faith and hope
Though bleeding to the heart
This anguish strife and pain
But ours to know a Crown of Thorns,
Sweet grace for us is gain
A cross, a bleeding heart and crown,
What greater gifts are given
Be still my heart, murmur not,
These are keys of heaven.
