THIS CHART SHOWS the median scores for grades three and five in the Baltimore schools. The schools listed are schools that scored at or above norm for large cities either in the third grade, the fifth grade or in both grades. Schools 221 and 227 scored the highest scores. 221 recorded a 5.0 test score on the third grade level and a 7.0 on the fifth grade level. 227 also showed a 7.0 test score for the fifth grade. 221's test scores have been high and constant for the five year period on both grade levels.

Iowa Test scores result does not upset Dr. Crew

Dr. John L. Crew acting city school superintendent; said Tuesday he was not distressed by the test results that showed pupils in the Baltimore school system did not perform as well as the national average and questioned the applicability of the test to Baltimore's urban environment.

The Iowa Tests of Basic Skills, which apparently measures verbal and mathematical ability, was given to students in grades 3-5, 7 and 9 last Spring. The scroes were publicized in accordance with the Maryland accountability law of 1972.

Dr. Crew said he was not upset by the figures released but suggested that the tests are not suited to urban environment and the lag in basic skill did not place city students significantly behind other Maryland pupils.

"Overall Baltimore city schools performed a little better than one would expect," said Dr. Crew.

He noted that 50 of the 150 schools exceeded their performances and only 20 fell below expectations when the state education department adjusted the test results for variables such as IQ and family incomes.

According to the test results, third graders scored 21 per cent below the norm al for 1975,virtually unchanged since 1970. Seventh graders slipped from 24 per cent to 10 per cent.

However, almost all the schools on the seventh grade level were not applicable to the test scores because the school either had no such grade in that year; was not opened in that year; had discontinued that year or the grade was not tested in that year.

Dr. Crew pointed out that even last year, which was their worst year, 10 per cent of the seventh graders exceeded the national norm.

Dr. Edward N. Whitney, staff director for the Office of Pupil Program Monitoring and Appraisal told the AFRO one problem they encountered is the alternating year testing requirement as a part of the state assessment program.

"This has prevented us from observing continuity of growth on a year to year basis," he said.

He explained, the extent to which the students can be observed, by looking at the 1973 test scores and the 1975 test scores; they have observed a continuity as far as achievement is concerned. He said, "the students are not regressing in the sense of the word; they are steadily achieving and performing comparable to what their counterparts are performing throughout the state."

A spokesman from the school public relation office said the tests are culturally bias.

She explained that there is some controversy over the test questions as to whether they are tailored for all children who take the test or just for a select few.

She pointed out the tests are not measuring what is being taught in the schools and the new program to help the student learn.

Social Service worker convicted of welfare fraud

Clarence H. Johnson, 52-year-old Department of Social Service employee was convicted Wednesday by a Criminal Court jury of welfare fraud amounting to $33,568.

Judge John R. Hargrove ordered a presentence report before imposing sentence.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Haven Kodeck, Mr. Johnson of the 3500 block Sedgemont Rd. rented a room from Mrs Sadie B. Vaughn, 2300 block N. Monroe St.

However, Mr. Johnson never stayed on Monroe St., but mailed illegal checks to her amounting from $220 to $314.

Court records reveal Mrs. Vaughn, 63, received the check from July 1972 to July 1974 and cashed the checks using several alias.

After cashing the checks, Mrs. Vaughn testified she would keep $35 from the checks and place the balance of money in an envelope under the pillow on a bed in Mr. Johnson's room.

Mr. Johnson has been suspended without pay since he was indicted last January. He was an interviewer in the income-maintenance section since 1970.

Mrs. Vaughn pleaded guilty to three charges and testified she used identification cards Mr. Johnson gave her to cash the checks.

Last year, more Blacks died from diseases associated with and caused by High Blood Pressure than any other factor. You can look and feel just fine and still have it, and that's the point.

An overwhelming majority of doctors all over the country agree that there is no reason for most people to die of High Blood Pressure, because it can be controlled.

Have your blood pressure checked frequently by your doctor, and if it is high, make sure you follow all advice to the letter.
