HEARD ACROSS THE CONTINENT

President Harding's Oration Over The Unknown Soldier Carried To Many Parts Of The Country

When President Harding delivered the funeral address over the body of the "Unknown Soldier" on Armistice Day, his words were heard by the largest audience the human voice has ever reached. His voice was carried across the continent to New York and San Francisco, where meetings composed of American Legion members and friends heard him plainly and distinctly through the medium of "Loud Speakers." In addition, a loud speaking system has been installed in the Arlington National Cemetary and if half a million people could have gathered on the broad slopes of that beautiful place, they could have heard with perfect clearness every word of the President's address, every note of the singers, [illegible] every syllable of the solemn committment services when they laid the "Unknown Hero" within his tomb.

No feat of communication has ever equalled this. Never before has the transmission of sound been used in this way. Although the President, [illegible] his Inaugural Address on [illegible] saw before him a vast audience [illegible]0,000 or more; and although [illegible] that everyone in that women gathered to hear him in cities that span the continent.

He had an opportunity for talking to his fellows never heretofore given to the head of this or any other nation It intitated a new era in oratory undreamed of heretofore.

In addition to the President's voice, all of the solemn ceremonies, the bugler's "taps," the hymns, the words of the foreign ministers as they bestowed honors upon this soldier and the solemn burial phrases were carried surely and distinctly to the waiting legionnaries across the continent.

For several weeks past, organizers of the American Legion and the engineers of the Bell System have been working together to bring about these meetings and the transmission of these Arlington ceremonies. Everything that the engineers have done has been predicated by the fact that Armistice Day was the most solemn minute in the history of America. For that reason the American Leyion, vetrans, who have a vital part in the day's events, were asked to co-operate Although numerous opportunities were offered by which the President's speech could be directed to miscellaneous channels, those in charge adopted a firm policy of sticking to the original plan and thus insuring success from the standpoint not only from the engineers and technical men but from the standpoint of the solumity of the occasion.

This opportunity for so many people to hear the words of the ceremony was the gift of the Bell Telephone System to the people of the nation. It is not a commercial enterprise in any way.

The engineers and experts in charge have now been working on the loud speaking system at the Arlington and across the continent and in the three cities for more than a month. On Armistice Day, telephone engineers all the way across the United States were on guard for twenty-four hours watching every bit of delicate equipment. For hundreds of [illegible] the famous trans-continental [illegible] phone line was patrolled by [illegible] linemen to guard against [illegible] breaks or accident. To [illegible] crowds in the three cities the [illegible] ident's voice passed over [illegible] of miles of wire, through a [illegible] of the most delicate yet [illegible] struments and apparatus [illegible] been "boosted" repeatedly [illegible] after being sent over the [illegible] plete crews of experts and [illegible] operating the loud speak[illegible] from Arlington all the [illegible] Francisco were out of [illegible] there was nothing visible [illegible] nothing except the [illegible] lification of the solomn [illegible] the President's stirri[illegible] that everyone who ca[illegible] can hear.

One of the miraculo[illegible] "Loud Speaker" is in[illegible] trol of the power, w[illegible] can be made to ca[illegible] more but at no po[illegible] aware of any mech[illegible] could stand in fr[illegible] turn around and [illegible] while the speech [illegible] he was able to d[illegible] from the zone o[illegible] area served by [illegible] There is no ra[illegible] one simply he[illegible] coming out o[illegible] and thorough[illegible]

Notice to Gunn[illegible] Of Ph[illegible]

In 1920 the State [illegible] Department established a State G[illegible] farm for the purpose of propagating Chinese Ringnecked Pheasants, and establish same in the covers of this state, as a permanent game bird. During the seasons of 1920 and 19[illegible] we liberated into the covers 4400 ten and 12 week old birds of this species, and from reports received throughout the state it is evident they are propagating and increasing wonderfully.

The Acts of 1920 prohibit the killing of the female at any time, however, it does not prohibit licensed hunters from killing the male during open season which is Nov. 10 to January 1.

From all indications the public in general is very much interested in this species of game, and in order to permanently establish this bird, we urgently request that persons deny themselves the privilege of killing these birds if the opportunity should present itself. We also urgently request the landowners on whose property the young birds were liberated to use their best endeavors in protecting them and prohibit hunters from killing same in any manner or at any time, until they firmly establish themselves.

The Chinese Ringnecked Pheasant is an insectivorous bird and, of course, are very beneficial to the agricultural industry, and just for this reason they should receive every consideration at the hands of the hunter and at the same time be given an opportunity to propagate and increase their family. When this has been accomplished, which no doubt will be within a few years, we will then request an open season on same.

—The last three days of this week the Chestertown merchants have been holding a community sale and have been offering some rare bargains.
