3 'n 1 salutes Del. Young

The Citizens Democratic Action Organization will salute Delegate Larry M. Young in a musical show-fashion extravaganza, Nov. 14.

The affair is entitled, "3 'n 1 Salute to Larry Young," and marks the completion of the delegate's second year in the legislature, his first year of writing a regular column for the AFRO-American Newspapers and his 27th birthday.

The affair will be hosted from 5 to 9 p.m. at the Gatsby, 1817 N. Charles St.

Nace's Day parade, Nov.

TRAPPE, Md. — The annual Nace's Day parade and celebration of the Emancipation Proclamation, started by a former slave and Civil War veteran in this Eastern Shore town will be held Saturday, Nov. 6.

The anniversary will be observed with special church services, a parade, and a wide variety of Eastern Shore delicacies, including oyster, duck, chicken, fish, vegetable soup, pigs feet, baked goods, and many other dishes.

The parade will begin at 1 p.m. at one end of Maple Street and will pause briefly in front of Trappe Mayor Maurice T. Adams's house where a song will be played before the parade moves on down Main Street toward the Scott's United Methodist Church.

There will also be a ceremony at the gravesite of Nathaniel Hopkins, founder of the Nace's Day celebration, in the old Paradise Cemetery on Route 5.

The Harrison Vessels travel group gathered at Trinity Baptist Church last week to chit chat and show pictures about the trip that they took to Canada during the summer. Among the suggestions that were made for next summer was a cruise up the St. Larence River, among other trips.

Congratulations to Ralph Spencer who recently received his LPN certificate. He has taken the state board and is awaiting the results. Ralph is the son of Lillian Spencer, supervisor of Central Supply Dept. at Provident Hospital and the son of Ralph Spencer Sr., long time postal employee.

Thanks for getting out to vote.

also given credit were for were also given credit for creating the spookhouse that soon became the main terrifying attraction.

Costume prize winners were: Sheryl Jennings, 10, dressed as a lady; Floyd Evans, 9, skeleton; Dorne Beverly, 6, a duck and Larry Stewart 12, dressed as a fat man. Judges who aided in the difficult task were Francine Turner and Marlene Rose.

This year the Central District Police station and the Maryland National Bank furnished the decorations and refreshments.

Mrs. Wilson stated that Saturday was the 4th annual party that she has volunteered to coordinate for the children in the Eutaw Garden Development and surrounding community. She is the mother of two elementary school aged children, a member of the Social Security volunteers and attends Central Baptist Church where she finds time to work with the Boy Scout troop.

Nancy Jordan, recreation leader and Morgan State University student acted as assistant coordinator for the Halloween activity.

SSA's Federal Women's Program will sponsor a conference on Career and Self-Development for Women on Tuesday, Nov. 9 and Wednesday Nov. 10 at the Woodlawn Headquarters complex.

Training sessions and work shops for conference participants are scheduled to take place during the day.

The evening hours featuring panel discussions, mini-career workshops, film festivals and a special session on Women and Social Security Law, will be open to the public.

The sessions will begin at 4:45 p.m. on Tuesday and 4 p.m., Wednesday.

BY THE WAY...

by Joe Black

They say that the family that shares together, cares together.

And although the first fires of romance, and the memories of wedding vows may grow dim, one important thing must constantly stay alive and grow.

And that is the glow that comes from caring. From sharing. And remembering that our children learn from love and guidance. From both parents.

Lately though, it seems that we hear too many stories about how the Black family unit isn't holding its own against the trials and temptations of our time.

Have too many of our Black families lost the closeness of family life? Of family love? Of sharing and caring?

I hope not, in spite of the excuse that socio-economic conditions make it necessary for both parents to work.

The excuse-users say that it leaves little time for the responsibilities of parenthood.

Sure. It's a valid excuse. But a cop-out at the same time. For some parents.

Regardless of how hard we have to chase the dollar, or how much time it takes, we must still take time for our children.

We must make it clear that we care for them. Otherwise, how will they learn to care for others?

This isn't just a mother's job. It is also the responsibility of Black fathers to instill family respect, pride, and love.

If we truly believe that Black is beautiful, and want others to believe it, we must take some precious time.

Time to make sure our family ties are as strong as our beliefs.

HANAE MORI

Soft look in focus

As the highlight of her Resort Collection '77, the international designer Hanae Mori takes the high-intensity colors that are hers alone (cherry, fuchsia, orange) and turns them misty with the sheerness of high fashion fabrics (silk chiffon, crepe de chine) — for an effect she calls The Soft Focus Silhouette.

The Soft Focus Silhouette is an elusive one — clinging to the curve of the body (almost), flattering to the figure (most definitely), sensuous to the touch. Madame Mori says, "It's the look you want when you're feeling rich or romantic, or both.

"It's an emotional and aesthetic contrast to the necessary practicality of the clothes a woman wears a major part of the day, whether she's working in an office or at home," she adds.

From the Ready to Wear Collection: Unusual floral prings, landscapes and seascapes; bareness, strapless, cutouts. As only Hanae Mori can dream them up.

Some standouts: Fifteen yards of sheer voile in a bold floral making a smashing orange and pink caftan;

Florals and geometrics on brick or blue-grey grounds have a 1930s look in 2-piece dresses of luxurious silk crepe de chine;

Stripes or polka dots in black on white georgette take over over an easy-living caftan jumpsuit;

Easy -to-wear short cotton jersey dresses in colorful floral butterfly prints.

The Couture Collection: For very special occasions, Madame Mori's long evening dresses. Here, her famed individually silk-screened prints on silk chiffon and silk crep de chine.

Some standouts: A two-tier petal dress in an orange rainbow print; the layers formed by scalloped hems of the cape top and skirt;

White silk chiffon dresses with jewel necks and petal sleeves drifted at the hem with a wide band of brilliant color (garnet, sapphire or amethyst); the effect repeated in the accompanying scarf belt;

Rich peasant long-sleeved off-the shoulder silk chiffons featuring floating panel patchwork, each patch a different flower;

White crepe de chine caftans inset at the neck, with floral print silk chiffon.

Craftsmanship. A tradition in Black America.

The weaver.

Weaving was a skill that slave artisans brought here from Africa. And because of it beautifully woven baskets, mats, rugs, coverlets and dress-making materials became an essential part of life in the new land.

It took very little effort for African weavers to adapt techniques learned at home to fit the needs of early American life.

And in their hands everyday objects became works of art. The designs they wove were intricate and original. The colors vivid and striking.

Skilled Black men and women like these helped shape America.

And their spirit of creativity is very much alive today.

RCA recognizes the value of innovative craftsmanship. And in this Bicentennial year, we feel it appropriate to call attention to those unheralded people who by their labors made meaningful contributions to the growth of this nation's commerce and industry.
