Do utilities cheat public each month?

WASHINGTON — Many utility companies are hiding non fuel items in the "fuel adjustment clause" of electric and gas bills, driving up customer prices in a deceptive way that escapes challenge, according to a congressional report.

The recently issued report said adjustment clauses — used by most states to let utility bills quickly reflect the rise and fall if coal, oil and natural $2.7 billion to utility gas prices have added charges nationwide since 1974, an average $380 increase per household.

Sens. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Lee Metcalf D-Mont. — who released the report by the Congressional Research Service — said the automatic adjustment clauses added $9.6 billion to consumer costs last year alone.

What a customer sees on his bill as a fuel adjustment charge can be deceptive," the senators said.

"The inclusion of such costs in fuel adjustment charges not only means that such charges are passed along automatically, but also that consumers in many states do not know what they are paying for, Muskie and Metcalf said.

LEGAL NOTICE

ORDINANCE NO. 434
Ordinance No. 434 of the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, approved July 29, 1977, adds new Section 170 to Article 19 of the Baltimore City Code (1966 Edition), title "Police Ordinances," to read as follows:

170. Loitering for the purpose of promoting prostitution.

(a) Legislative findings.

The City Council hereby finds and declared that loitering for the purpose of prostitution, patronizing or promoting prostitution is disruptive of the public peace in that certain persons engaged in such conduct in public places harass and interfere with the use and enjoyment by other persons lawfully engaged in their lawful occupations and business.

The City Council hereby finds that the incidence of such conduct in public places has increased disorderly in that persons aggressively engaging in solicitation for the purpose of the purpose of prostitution have, by their course of conduct in public places, caused citizens who wished to be free from such solicitations to be the unwilling victims of repeated harassment. Law abiding citizens have been in individual privacy, as a result of such public solicitations, to be the unwilling victims of repeated harassment. Property values in certain neighborhoods has been disrupted and has deteriorated.

(b) Definitions.

Jailed suing jailers

(DOC) inmates remain "backed - up" under present confinement conditions.

The Board of Public Works approved Thursday, August 4 the state's purchase of the former Continental Can Company site, agreeing to pay $2.9 million for the 25 acre site, but leaving open the question of whether the old factory building would be torn down or renovated.

What makes it worse is that DOC said in a report that "approximately 2,000 persons will be housed in other facilities outside of the State institutions" in fiscal year 1978.

For fiscal year 1977 DOC paid $3,173,875 for its inmates housed in local jails, according to Lois Kalberman, budget analysis for the Department of Fiscal Services.

Of the total of those housed in local jails, 795 were located in the Baltimore City Jail as of July 29.

A suit filed by inmates in the Baltimore City Jail complains about the conditions that exist in the jail and asks that the Division of Corrections, DOC to remove its inmates.

Those named as defendants in the suit include: Warden Gordon Kamka; Governor Marvin Mandel; Robert Lally, secretary of public safety and correctional services; Marc Levine, commissioner of corrections and Louis L. Goldstein and William S. James, both of the Board of Public Works.

Also named are seven members of the Baltimore City Jail Board.

Below are additional excerpts from the suit against the jail continued from Tuesday's edition of the Baltimore AFRO.

"Inmates are presently being housed in day rooms and other areas of the jail formerly utilized for recreation and other inmate activities.

"Outdoor recreation areas are overcrowded to the extent that many inmates are receive no physical exercise at all. As a result, inmates are being denied the reasonable minimum amount of physical exercise

"Because sick call is held at the same time commissary privileges are available, inmates must give up the right to seek medical attention or the right to purchase the few amenities that jail life provides.

"For this reason, inmates with communicable illnesses, in some instances, fail to seek medical attention and thus present a health hazard to fellow inmates.

"Physicians are physically present at the jail only about seven hours per week. Consequently, only the most obvious cases of serious injury are brought to their attention.

"In this connection, Jerome Duvall (an inmate) has requested to see a doctor on three occasions, but has never seen one despite assurances from jail nurses that he would be seen.

"Sick call procedures are wholly inadequate for ensuring immate health and safety. Inmates are required to wear shackles to the infirmary, are then paraded past a window where a nurse, in cursory fashion, receives the complaint.

"In virtually all cases, no treatment is afforded except for the dispensing of medicine from a standardized lists. Much of the medication consists of tranquilizers. Rarely, if ever, are inmates allowed to see a doctor.

"A 'complete physical examination' is not given incoming inmates. As a result, inmates with communicable diseases pass through the general inmate population. Recently, one inmate with infected tuberculosis was found to be housed in a crowded dormitory

"Some inmates are shackled and remain shackled for substantial periods of time while in the infirmary.

"Many patients shackled in this manner are manageable with chemical restraints. Because jail physicians are not always 'promptly accessible' to prescribe medication, however, inmates remain shackled unnecessarily.

"Because of overcrowding and the inadequacy of the jail budget resulting from such overcrowding, inmates are served meals lacking in sufficient quantity and nutritional value. Under conditions presently existing at the jail, it is impossible to serve meals in a palatable and hygienic manner.

"The jail dining area is unsanitary and in poor repair because it is used to feed a number of inmates greatly in excess of its designed capacity. The ceiling in the dining area leaks and puddles of water are constantly found on the floor and tables. Rodent and insect infestation is a serious problem in both the kitchen and dining area.

"Because of overcrowding, jail officials are unable to allow inmates to receive the two family visits per week. At present, only one such visit per week is allowed.

"Appropriate facilities for the cleaning and drying of inmates clothes are not available. Laundry service is totally unavailable and there is only a single utility sink on each section of the jail in which clothes may be washed by hand.

"Laundry soap is not provided and inmates are able to use only hand soap for this purpose. Moreover, the utility sink mentioned herein is also used to clean floor mops and toilet brushes and is thus unsanitary.

"There are no facilities for drying clothes and inmates therefore hang them to dry in their 6' x 8' cells, because of the number of inmates presently housed in the jail and the limited number of available shower heads, inmates are allowed an insufficient amount of time to bathe.

"Inmates legally committed to the Maryland Division of Correction but who are confined to the Baltimore City Jail are denied any meaningful chance of parole.

"Despite statutory eligibility for parole in many cases, upon information and belief, only twenty-six inmates have been paroled from the Baltimore City Jail during fiscal 1976.

"Inmates with the best chance for parole are those who have responded in a positive manner to minimum security status in DOC operated programs and facilities. Confinement in Baltimore City Jail necessarily denies convicted inmates the opportunity to participate in minimum security programs.

"Inmates legally committed to the Maryland Division of Correction but who are confined in the Baltimore City Jail are denied the opportunity to participate in rehabilitative programs available to other DOC inmates in other facilities.

"Conditions presently existing at the Baltimore City Jail violate constitutional, statutory and suggested minimal standards."

Joyce Brenda, one of the attorneys at the Legal Services Clinic who is handling the case, expected to go to trail next month, said although the suit does not seek monetary damages it does ask that all Division of Correction inmates be removed.

The court should issue a preliminary and permanent injunction preventing the Warden and Jail Board of the Baltimore City Jail from now or in the future accepting inmates who are legally committed to the DOC." the suit says.

Patients robbed, raped in Dr. Keith Ford's office

A woman was raped in a doctor's office on tuesday, after two men took more than $200 from four patients.

Police report the robbery took place at Dr. Keith A. Ford's office in the 2500 block Garrison Blvd.

Dr. Ford was not in his office when his patients were robbed and the woman raped.

Police state a man entered the office around 5 p.m. and asked the nurse for a glass of water. After getting the water from the nurse, police reveal another man came in the office with a gun in his hand.

The men then held the nurse in the doctor's office and took the patients' money when they entered the room.

Patients who were forced to lie on the floor and the amount of money taken were, Mary Quinn, 39, 4200 bock Bonner Rd., lost $225; Henry Wylie, 45, of 4100 block Hayward Ave., $15; Roosevelt Robinson, 35, 500 block Randor Ave., $10 and Alton Livingston, 39, 2300 block Avalon Ave., 40 cents.

Before leaving the doctor's office, one of the men held a gun on the patients while the other man sexually assaulted a woman

Blue Cross requests CAT scanner disapproval

Blue Cross called on the Maryland Comprehensive Health Planning Agency to (MCHPA) to refuse approval of more than four additional CAT scanners for the Central Maryland area, charging that to do otherwise would raise health care costs in the community well in excess of the value of the services the scanner could provide

In a letter to William Landis director of the MCHPA, Blue Cross charged that approval of the recommendation of the Central Maryland Health Systems Agency for seven additional scanners along with the four already approved or in operation — would be contrary to the Agency's own criteria and Blue Cross also stated its guidelines.

Blue Cross also stated its own analysis revealed a maximum need in the Central Maryland areas for only seven to eight scanner rather than the suggested 11, and approval of the Agency's recommendation would "set in motion a network of resources authorized to operate 25 per cent below minimum acceptable utilization standards."

Concluding that there would not be enough patients in the area to support 11 scanners, Blue Cross warned that the community may be forced to absorb annual losses to the hospitals involved of nearly $850.000 if the Central Maryland Agency's recommendation is accepted.

The total cost to the Central Maryland community for services provided by 11 scanners according to Blue Cross, could reach $5.8 million.

Of that amount, Blue Cross estimates its members, representing 40 per cent of hospital patients in the area — will be required to pay an estimated $1.3 million.

"This liability could add between 0.7 per cent and 3.5 per cent to our rates," Blue Cross said, depending on actual utilization of the equipment. Our actuares estimate that, as a result, Blue Gross would have to generate an increase of $1,400,000 to $7,100,000 annually in premium income in order to provide coverage for hospital CAT scanning services in the Central Maryland area."

Blue Cross also expressed concern over the possibility that having too many scanners available, losses could lead to the provision of medically unscrupulous services.

Mitchell announces seni or citizen project
