While on probation for narcotics violations, 12 days after he was released on the $50,000 bond and told "not to leave the state of Maryland without first obtaining the permission of the court," Kane went to Virginia on March 28 to be photographed and receive his driver's license.

His residence on the license was an address in Alexandria, Va.

Court records state John, of the 2900 block Spelman Rd., who is still a fugitive, has been charged by police with the gangland style murder of Davis.

Kane and Jones are charged in a seven count indictment with conspiracy, possession of firearms while being convicted felons, and receipt of a firearm in interstate commerce with intent to commit a crime.

Some questions they have not been answered by the police and federal prosecutors concerning Kane and Elijah Davis are:

Did Kane have a role in Davis' death? Did Davis ever work for the "Kane Organization"? Is Gregory Jones still alive? What was Kane's involvement with "Junior Bunk" ?

Henry E. Richardson, 27, of the 1900 block Cecil Ave., was charged with conspiring with Jones in the slaying of Davis.

Richardson was arrested Nov. 2, 1977 while he was sleeping in a house in southwest Baltimore.

Six other men who were charged in three related firearms indictments with Kane were David F. Perry, 28, 800 block Barbara Court; Charles E. Perry, 34, 600 block Midland Rd.

Also David L. Fitzpatrick, 22, 3300 block Appleton Ave.; Germanus John Blottenberger, 29, 300 block Taylor Ave.; Phillip Evers Swope, 40, 3300 block Glyndon Ave, and Melvin Luther Adkins, 33, 300 block Colby Circle.

—Bay's reprieve

"It's a paper program," said Charles Ravenell, president of the student government association. "We've had a representative at every meeting since the trustee was designated and as far as we can see nothing has been finalized."

"The students have some concern about whether or not sufficient monies are available to maintain a faculty and administration at the school," said Herbert Singleton, attorney for the 800 students.

"They don't know how much money there is to start a new academic year and there is some question if the money can provide the students with a quality administration and a good faculty."

Bay College was placed in receivership by a federal judge Tuesday after school officials declared bankruptcy stating the school had assets of about $600,000 and debts in excess of $500,000, most of that owed to the federal government alone.

The judge appointed Charles Howard Jr., federal trustee designate for the school and ordered Howard to marshall all the school's resources for a reorganization.

Singleton said placing the school into receivership has put a halt to all actions in three other suits pending against the school.

The three civil actions include a suit filed by the faculty against the school for back pay; a suit filed by one of the school's major creditors and an injunction filed by the students and enforced by a Circuit Court judge keeping the school open for 10 days.

Singleton said the students are dissatisfied as the way efforts to reorganize the school are taking place.

"They are not at all pleased with what is going on," he said of the students at all."

"If Mr. Howard is realistic about reorganizing Bay College he has to involve the students," Singleton said. "He says he will but there is some money coming in someplace but I don't know where."

Howard, who confirmed that the school will open Monday for registration of the late spring semester, said there is money coming in to help the school.

He would not, however, say from what source the money would come from.

Yet, the AFRO learned that an area church has formed a committee to provide money for the school.

According to officials of St. Martin's Church of Christ the committee, called "The Committee to Save Bay," has proposed a plan backed by the church that will provide Bay College with a substantial sum of money insuring all of Bay's debts.

Proficiency tests approved

The Balumore Public School system has moved toward a proposal to require students to pass proficiency tests before being promoted or graduated.

The school board Thursday approved the plan that calls for proficiency testing before graduation after parents voiced their support at a public hearing Tuesday night.

At the hearing several parents asked what would happen if large numbers of students fail the tests?

"We hope there will be not a downgrading of the tests, but an upgrading of the students," said John Howard, chairman of the Region IV Advisory Council.

According to the plan students would have to score 70 percent or better on city developed tests next year in order to be promoted to thesnext grade.

In order to graduate, high school seniors would have to score at least 80 percent on the state functional reading test, which the state plans to use as a graduation requirement in 1982.

Last fall, only 76 percent of the city's eleventh graders were able to pass the tests.

The question remains what will happen if large numbers of students do not pass the tests and have to repeat grades. Also, who will suffer the most, students or teachers?
