Links, Inc. share evening with teenagers

The Baltimore Chapter of Links, Inc. shared an evening of social and cultural enrichment with the teen-age girls of the Florence Crittenton Home, an affiliate of the Child Welfare League of America recently.

In recognition of the civic responsibility—to promote the growth and positive social development of the more than twenty-five residents at the Center, the Links' Services to Youth Committee, chaired by Mrs. Robbie Chissell, hosted an entertaining "Everybody's Birthday Party."

Participating in the serving of refreshments and distribution of personal gifts and game prizes were Link Vice President Ruth Glenn and committee members: Catherine Adams, Gerri DuBordes, Cardrienne Griffin, Mary S. Harris, Audrey L. Howard, Lillian Jones, Jimmie Laforest, Emma Michael, Barbara Patterson and Alice Russell.

In salute to The International Year of the Child, the Her-o-Links of Lillian Jones and Cardrienne Griffin joined by Five infant children of the Crittenton Home shared the social spotlight of the evening.

The Links were welcomed on behalf of the residents by the Home's executive director, Ms. Ann Davis and members of the staff including Francis Hicks, R.N., Anthony Batten and Ms. Nancy McLernon.

The Committee was given an extensive tour of the Crittenton facility, conducted by the girls, and was later presented with a tray of cookies in appreciation for the social awareness and concern for cultural development expressed.

In keeping with the organization's current theme "Linking Together With Third World Nations" Links were colorfully dressed in African original tie-dye and hand embossed attire.

To further highlight the cultural theme, a display of African artifacts from the private collections of individual Links including ivory, mahogany and ebony carvings; jewelry, cloth, feather-art arrangements and oil paintings were exhibited.

The Crittenton Home residents enthusiastically received the featured joint presentation of an African tour commentary and showing of slides by Link and Connecting Link Cardrienne and James Griffin.

Participating in an informal rap session which immediately followed, Links C. Adams, R. Chissell, L. Jones, A. Howard Laforest and E. Michael shared their knowledge and African travel experiences to further enlighten the youthful group.

Additional member Links without whose encouragement and financial contributions the festive evening would not have been possible include: May Adams, Pearl C. Brackett, Helen C. Burwell, Beatrice Butler, Kathleen Carter, Marie Francis;

Betty Harris, Frances B. Hill, Marie Hicks, Yvette Murphy, Lydia Mussenden, Audrey Norris, Etta Pfiffer, May Pitts, Marion Russell, Bennie Ruth Simpkin, Ada Weaver, Theresa Weaver and Pauline Watts.

Deltas to unveil historical monument

WASHINGTON

Delta Sigma Theta, Inc., a national public service sorority, is returning to its place of birth, Howard University, to unveil and dedicate a historical monument on Saturday, April 28.

The monument, sculpted by nationally recognized artist James King of Detroit, is fabricated in corten steel, stands 14 feet, and will be placed in a large mall on the Howard University campus adjacent to the University's Founders Library.

The Sculpture has been named FORTITUTE and is being dedicated to the sorority's founders.

Teens file suit for children's aid

Three teen-age girls filed a lawsuit in federal court this week challenging the state's 18-year-old age minimum for Aid to Dependent Children.

In the suit filed in U.S. District Court, Wanda Allen, 17, her sister, Sharon Allen, 16, and Vernetta Brown, 17, claim state aid for their children. The suit alleges that the state's age requirement is unconstitutional because it conflicts with federal eligibility rules.

The teen-agers claimed that they were eligible for aid under federal requirements, but are denied the same benefits under the state's Aid to Families with Dependent Children because they are not yet 18.

The suit, also filed by the Baltimore Welfare Rights Organization on behalf of girls under 18, seeks to have parents who are under 18 receive the same benefits as those over 18.

Cancer

Cancer Control Month in D.C. will be highlighted on WDVM - TV (Channel 9) with a half - hour program Saturday (April 28) beginning at 2 p.m.

During the program, American Cancer Society National President Dr. LaSalle D. Lefall Jr., will give an update on cancer research and trends. A portion of the national crusade film "The Tom Harper Story" will also be shown.

Don't Pass Us By

"Sure I Smile A Lot"

I guess I'm nearly always smiling . . . I smile because I feel good. Sometimes I smile more often than other times; like when I'm eating lunch at school.

The best part of lunch is we get hot and cold together, and they're separate. The hot stays hot and doesn't make the cold portion warm or soggy. Soggy doesn't make me smile.

I get things I like to eat . . . and that makes me smile. The Morton folks who have our Hot School Lunch Program also supply a third of the nourishment I need to play and study . . . and that makes Mommie smile.
