—Klansman's trial

Government witnesses testified they had been told by Savina that he had several hundred members in various branches of his group, including about 200 teenagers in the youthful arm of his organization.

On the stand Thursday, Savina admitted there were only three members of his Klan group, himself, Eifert and David Berg, a police informant, who warned Pennington of the impending bombing attempt.

Savina told the court he became worried about the apparent seriousness of Eifert's plans to bomb Pennington's home, which doubled as NAACP headquarters. He said he drove with his wife, to a carry-out restaurant in mid-May and spoke with officer Herbert Carter.

At first Carter told Savina to stay away from Eifert, but later advised Savina to play along with Eifert in the bombing attempt. By late Thursday morning, Carter had not been called as a defense witness in the case.

Savina testified he quit the Klan a week before his arrest because he was concerned about threats made on his life, including one Savina said was from Pennington. The safety of his family also was another reason Savina gave for giving up his Klan activities.

Eifert, in his testimony, said the night before Savina was arrested, they drove around Western Baltimore County looking for an isolated spot to test a bomb Savina had constructed from a plastic gallon milk jug, half-filled with about 50 cents worth of gasoline and sporting a green-colored fuse.

Warren Etchison, a radio technician, told the jury he infiltrated Savina's group to get information about the Klan's rivals, the Communist Worker's Party, whom Etchison said was behind the impending race wars.

He said he was not working with the police, but was conducting an investigation of his own.

Etchison testified he and Savina discussed plans to "blow up fire bomb, and otherwise destroy" NAACP buildings. He said Savina wanted Etchison to detonate a bomb.

Savina would supply the materials and he would supply Savina with an alibi he said. Etchison also said Savina mentioned wanting to bomb a Jewish synagogue and Congressman Parren Mitchell.

The trial was continuing at AFRO presstime, but attorneys in the case said they hoped to wrap up witness testimony by Friday morning and begin final arguments in the case.

In its decision, the board said McCown committed the "common-law crimes" of assault and battery when he shot McGee March 20, 1980.

Swisher said that he had not yet read the board's decision but still thought its interpretation of criminal intent "very broad."

He said he did not regret his decision, in which he said McCown did not have criminal intent because he had acted under the mistaken belief" that he was witnessing a robbery when he shot McGee.

McCown was fired from the police department in June 1980 after a five-member trial board ruled that the 33-year-old white detective violated police procedure when he fired three shots at McGee.

neth Johnson, 17, of the 2000 block Etting Street.

Brown was arrested Tuesday night at his home and according to police, Saunders, who lives next door was arrested as he was leaving his home by a police officer.

With a quiver in her voice, Mrs. Johnson said, "Why would my son do something when he was looking forward to coming home next month?"

Johnson was arrested Wednesday at the Maryland Training School for Boys. James Dean of the Maryland Training School said he had been living at the home since June and was allowed to come home on the weekend.

Howard Gersch, assistant state's attorney in charge of violent crime, told the AFRO, "It is too early to say if the state will ask for the death penalty. We have to sit down and examine the evidence and we have to look at the case."

surrendering to an almost rabid crew of "law and order" tough guys who cried that the two were coddling prisoners.

Both Goodlander and Kamka were not afraid to take the heat for their policy of incarceration and opposed to "warehousing," but apparently their boss, Gov. Harry Hughes, decided to bow to the raging voices of folks like Del. Patrick McDonogh, D-Baltimore and Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau.

Public figures like these two screamed that Kamka and Goodlander were creating a "mess" within the prison system, and that they were actually endangering the lives of the public they were being paid to protect.

Although serious incidents of mis-management probably can be found in the Kamka-Goodlander administration, it behooves us to remember that lynch mobs should never be a substitute for representative democracy and fair play.

Let's look at the results of the "probe" and the "arrests". Nine of the accused have recently seen their cases thrown out of court by Supreme Bench Judge Robert Bell, and lawyers for the other 18 accused are pressing Bell for a similar decision.

But wait a minute. Two men lost their jobs as a result of the flap stirred up by the incident.

And no, five months later, the two have been replaced by two "hardliners", Thomas Schmidt and Joseph Galley. Recently, Schmidt chaired a panel which recommended that two new maximum security prisons be built in the state.

As for the community corrections philosophy which Kamka and Goodlander attempted to implement, there will be no more such buildings in the state for years to come.

So, in conclusion, a group of escapes that really were not escapes have ultimately resulted in Maryland turning back the clock on corrections.

As a result of the trumped-up "escape" incident, Maryland has lost its chance to build a new future in corrections, and instead has fallen into that old familiar pattern of lock-em-up.

Apparently, Governor Hughes no longer feels the need to listen to the beat of a different drummer. (Next year is an election year.)

she likes Baltimore, and has found its people very friendly. She also likes things to look nice, and cared for.

Mrs. Lee doesn't have any children of her own, but she enjoys the neighborhood children, and likes to give them candy and popsicles as treats. She also spends part of her day helping her invalid sister who lives two doors away. She shares her home with her three pet dogs. She shares her joy with all.

"Miss Ruth", as she is fondly called by the children, attends New Carmel Star Baptist Church, Baltimore and Monroe Streets. She enjoys the preaching and especially the choir, although she doesn't sing. She said, "... I croak like a frog, but I love to listen".

Mrs. Ruth D. Lee, a spirited AFRO Clean Block worker, college graduate, wife and homemaker is a very special lady. If you are ever in the 600 blk. N. Brice Street, off Edmondson Avenue in West Baltimore, stop by, say 'hello,' and receive some inspiration for your day.
