Morgan band set for 3rd in NFL series

The 120 - piece "Magnificent Marching Machine" of Morgan State University will perform at halftime Sunday for the New York Jets - Houston Oilers game at Shea Stadium.

This will be the third appearance of the band under the aegis of the National Football League.

Similar halftime shows were provided for the Sept. 7 opening contest of the Monday Night Football (TV) series, in which San Diego visited the Cleveland Browns, and the Baltimore Colts' home opener Sept. 13, against Buffalo.

The band also will provide entertainment for Buffalo's home game against the Colts, Oct. 4, and Philadelphia's hosting of Baltimore on Nov. 15.

UNDETERRED BY WEATHER — Confirming their pledge of determined but peaceful protest, an estimated 7,000 persons demonstrated against appearance of the South African Springbok rugby team in Albany Tuesday night. The game against a lily - white U.S. all - star team, went on after anti - apartheid efforts to block it failed in court.

Dark clouds hover over Colts' Sunday

For Baltimore's big league teams, dark clouds seem ever present as they move into the weekend.

Not only are the Orioles in dire straits as far as the American League East is concerned, but equally precarious is the position of the Colts in the NFL east

For the latter, things don't figure to improve Sunday as the Miami nemesis comes into Memorial Stadium (2 p.m.) for the first of two 1981 meetings.

The Dolphins are unbeaten to date after rolling over the Cardinals, Steelers and Oilers. The Colts have lost to Buffalo and Denver after surprising New England.

The Colts registered an impressive 30 - 17 victory over the Dolphins in the Orange Bowl last year. But, on the dark side, it turned out to be the only win Baltimore had scored over Miami since the title winning year of 1977.

Over - all, the Colts show a dismal 9 - 14 record against their Sunday visitors.

It may take more than the desire to avenge their six losses in the last seven outings. But fans looking at Baltimore's history of springing surprises, are certain to be hoping this weekend.

2,000 brave torrential rain to lodge peaceful rugby protest

ALBANY, N.Y. — Despite a strong feeling of bitterness, civil rights advocates promised throughout preparations to protest that there would be no violence if and when the South African Springboks played a rugby game here Tuesday night.

A conservative of 2,000 demonstrators withstood an evening - long downpour to make known their objections to the presence of the South Africans.

But the only violence to the game occurred on the playing field where the Springboks ran roughshod over a lily - white U.S. all - star team, 41 - 0.

The on - again, off - again match at Bleecker Stadium got final approval Tuesday when U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall turned down a state plea to halt the game hours before the contest began.

His action upheld the U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan, which ruled the match should be played so long as it posed no danger to public safety.

The size of the anti - apartheid demonstration was smaller than expected, mainly because of the weather and partially because of confusion caused by court battles over the status of the match.

Police Capt. John Dale said there were two or three arrests but he did not have details.

In a heavy rain, about 300 riot - equipped police and sheriff's deputies swamred around the stadium, checking spectators and reporters inside with metal detectors and watching the protesters outside.

At the end of the game, demonstrators heard protest speakers condemn apartheid.

Idle Bears await Bowie

Bowie, coached by John Organ, carries a current record of 1-1. The Bulldogs lost to Hampton 35-0 then defeated Salisbury State 7-6.

Morgan State's 28-0 victory over Bowie State last season at Bowies last season at Bowie between the two Maryland institutions.

Soviets, Africans warn of LA Olympics boycott

The Soviet Union and Black African nations delivered an open threat to the United States last week that they will foster a damaging boycott of the 1984 Olympic Games if America permits a South African rugby team's proposed tour of this country.

The 1984 Olympics are scheduled for Los Angeles.

Obviously, the Russians feel that Uncle Sam's harboring of a team representing an unrelenting racist country provides a more legitimate complaint than that which prompted the White House to order a boycott of the 1980 games in Moscow.

The U.S. led a 51 - nation rejection of Moscow because of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Mal Whitfield
'...case very simple...'

The Soviet Olympic Committee said the United States violated the Olympic Charter by even allowing a South African Rugby team entry to the country.

The Soviet statement said contacts with South African sporting organizations are a violation of Rule No. 3 of the Olympic Charter, which bans discrimination against countries or individuals on grounds of race, religion or politics.

The Soviets said further that they are solidly behind the statement made Friday by the sports attache to the American Embassy in Nairobi.

Mal Whitfield, a former American track star and now sports attache to the embassy in Kenya, told the City Council he was representing the views of African nations and the Supreme Council of Sport Africa, the governing body for sports in Africa.

"The Black Africans' case is very simple," Whitfield said. "They will not participate (in the Olympics) if the Springboks participate in any athletic or sports competitions in this country.

"It is unfortunate that the Olympic Games are going to be held in Los Angeles in 1984 because we are going to miss some of the great nations of the world participating because of the Springboks.
