'Ascent of Man' film series planned

Film Series "Ascent of Man" begin at Coppin

The Co-Curricular Committee of Coppin State College, Department of Language, Literature, and Philosophy is sponsoring as part of its film presentations this year the challenging series Ascent of Man, in color, narrated by Jacob Bronowski.

The thirteen films in the series challenge us to think about man's future in the light of the scientific achievements of the past.

The films show man "imposing his will" on nature to produce science ("knowledge") of the physical world, including knowledge of himself, and pose the problem of "the humanist tradition in science," which has "some results that seems inhuman."

The series begins Friday, October 2, 1981 at 12 noon in the Library Multipurpose room with the film Lower Than The Angels, which concerns "man's superiority among the animals."

The films following trace man as agriculturist, architect, alchemist and - mystic - become - chemist, mathematician, musical harmonist, painter of perspectives, and astronomer, man is in the humanist tradition of making a better life.

But the next films deal with the discoveries of industrial technology and atomic physics, which have results, stretching back in time and into the future, that may seem worse, not better, for mankind.

All films will be shown in the Multipurpose room at 12 noon every Friday through February. All are welcome to attend.
