FARM WOMEN ENJOY MEETING AT STILL POND

The Kent County Council for Home Demonstration Work met at Still Pond at 10.30 a. m. on Monday, March 26th.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. William Medders. Following the report of the Secretary and reports of committees, Mrs. Wm. T. Brown who was appointed as a delegate to the Rural Women's conference at Frederick, read a most splendid report of the meeting.

The Council then proceeded with the election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Mm. Medders, First Vice-President, Mrs. Sewell Lee, Second Vice-President, Mrs. Linwood Sutton, Secretary, Miss Susan V. Hill, Treasurer, Mrs. A. F. T. Raum. Delegates, Mrs. Howard Clendaniel, Mrs. Edward C. Hebron, and Mrs. W. B. Copper.

The first speaker on the program was Miss Bertha Knight of the Maryland University Extension Service. Miss Knight in her usual affable manner gave a most instructive talk on Rugs and Floor Coverings, which was illustrated by the use of many floor coverings. Mrs. Marion Bell, specialist in Home Management, then spoke on the Care and Renewing of Floors. The women were much interested in floors and it was decided to eliminate Mrs. Bell's talk on Budgeting for the afternoon and take up the discussion of floors again.

At one o'clock the Club adjourned for lunch. The Still Pond women had prepared delicious sandwiches and coffee and ice cream was for sale. During the lunch hour the women were given a chance to inspect the clothing exhibit that was prepared by Miss Knight.

At 2 o'clock the meeting was called to order again and opened with a roll call and report of clubs. The clubs were well represented. Following the report of clubs, which were very interesting, Mrs. Bell then resumed her talk on floors. The women entered freely into the discussion and, if one can judge from the requests which have come for help, the demonstration must have been very successful. The next subject on the program for discussion was the Care and Feeding of Baby Chicks, but as many women felt that could be taken up in the local club meetings, we passed to the next speaker, Miss Knight, who discussed fully with the use of illustrative material, walls, draperies, pictures and other phases of house-furnishings.

The last speaker on the program was Miss Hill, who, before beginning her talk, made a few announcements, the most important ones being the Short Course for women to be held at College Park from June 18 to 22, and a notice from Mr. J. K. Atherton in regard to feeding hogs garbage which contained infected pork.

In her talk to the club women, Miss Hill stressed the importance of keeping the local club interested and offered as a solution to the problem a definitely planned program for study with goals sets and an accurate record kept of accomplishments, and in addition to the project work, she urged the clubs to plan a broad program of work for the year that would interest many women. Miss Knight and Mrs. Bell were then called to give a brief account of the project work they hoped to carry on by means of local leaders. The meeting then adjourned until the evening session.

After attending a delicious supper served by the Still Pond Grange, the president called the meeting to order again and atfer a short business meeting, proceeded with the evening program. Mrs. Marion Bell spoke on simple, inexpensive water systems for the farm home which was very thoroughly discussed. The program for the day closed with an illustrated lecture on Landscape Gardening by Mr. W. R. Ballard, of Maryland University Extension Service. Mr. Ballard has done some work along this line in the county and the council hope to follow it up this year in the local clubs.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Mr. Henry Powell Hopkins delivered an illustrated lecture on architecture before the student body of Friday night, March 23. Mr. Hopkins is the architect who had designed the college gymnasium and several other buildings in Chestertown. He is well known here in town and on the Shore as well as in some of the larger cities of the country as an architect of note. Unlike the archaeologist, Mr. Hopkins was interested in the aesthetic phase of ancient buildings, not of the past life that they have disclosed, but rather their later adaptations to works of architecture. It was that side of history with which he dealt. So he began with the plan of the pyramids and the temples of ancient Egypt. Then followed the interior of the pyramids. While on that subject he showed slides of the treasures found in the recently excavated tomb of King Tut-Ank-Amen. In a knowing manner he told the students that once there had been a young man named Amen. His chief claim to greatness before he became king was the unequaled feat of drinking two tanks of Egyptian beer. So they named him Two-Tank-Amen, and for the sake of euphony his name was later modified to Tut-Ankl-Amen. That was a delightful joke. But the sad part about it is that some of the more credulous and less-knowing believed that. He then passed on to the temples of Greece and Rome, and Turkey and Spain, and the buildings of England and France and Italy and concluded with the modern buildings of America. The slides were beautiful and interesting. The talk was spiced with bits of quiet humor and the students spent a leasant and profitable two hours.

Telephone Growth in Maryland

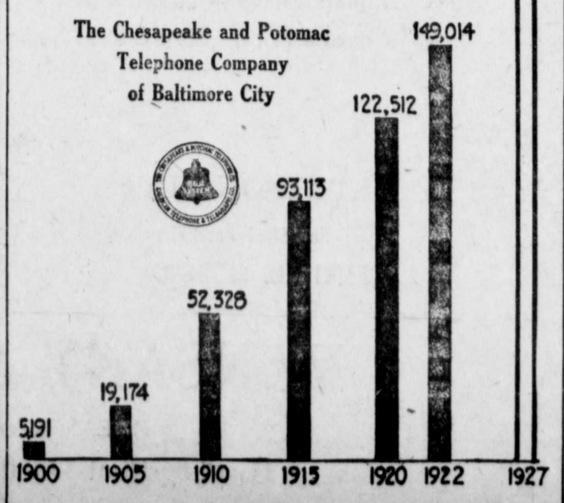

The value of telephone service to the user is dependent upon the number of telephones with which he can communicate. If there were no other telephones to talk to, the service would be of no value. This is peculiar to a telephone system; in no other utility is the value of the service to one patron dependent upon how many other patrons there may be.

As cities, towns and communities grow, the requirements of the telephone user expand, and the Company must meet those requirements by adding new subscribers to the system.

To attract these new subscribers, it must furnish a high standard of service at reasonable rates. The remarkable growth in telephones in the State of Maryland, as shown by the accompanying chart, we believe is evidence that the Company has met these requirements reasonably well.

The future requirements must always be planned for well in advance. This chart also shows the estimated number of telephones in Maryland at the end of 1927. We are now making provision for the growth during this next five years.
