THE TRANSCRIPT

THE fire Monday morning, which for a time threatened many sections of Chestertown, should make every property holder in Chestertown willing to do his part toward investing in the purchase of proper fire-fighting apparatus. It should no longer be a question of whether he will invest, as it is not a contribution, an investment and now, as any minute his property might be endangered. At one time during the recent fire four buildings were on fire from sparks and with the present apparatus divided there is very little left to fight the main fire. In many cases the men who risk their lives in fighting fires are not property holders, but men who are only too glad to help protect the property of their fellow man. Is it not fair that the property holders should furnish these men with the proper apparatus and equipment to work with, so they can stand the heat, smoke and fumes that they are compelled to encounter, and also the necessary apparatus so that they can get water on the burning buildings and still stay at a reasonable distance from the heat. When the fire is out it is the natural Barclay yesterday afternoon to meet the Queen Anne's champions who breaks out. Chestertown has a Volunteer Fire Co., which cannot receive too much praise for their work on the recent fire, so let's everybody get behind it and show these men that we are with them.
