DEATHS

WILLIAM W. BECK

William W. Beck, for years prominent in the political, civic and social life of this county, died at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Thursday morning at 5 o'clock, aged 53 years. Mr. Beck had an attack of the grip in January while in Chestertown on business, from which he never recovered. He had been in bad health for several years, but was getting better until attacked with the grip.

Mr. Beck was a man of amiable disposition and he had a large circle of friends. He has been the leader of the Democratic party of Kent county for many years and has held several responsible political positions, the first being chairman of the State Central Committee for this county, followed by that of State's Attorney for two terms; at the expiration of his last term as State's Attorney, he was elected to the State Senate, where he served for four years. Much important legislation was enacted during the sessions he was a member of the Senate in which he took a prominent part. Upon the resignation of Judge Lewin W. Wickes as a member of the State Tax Commission in 1918, Mr. Beck was appointed by Governor Harrington to succeed Judge Wickes, and after the death of Senator Arthur P. Gorman, who was chairman of that commission, Mr. Beck was promoted by Gov. Ritchie to the chairmanship, which position he held at the time of his death.

Mr. Beck studied law under the late Marion deK. Smith in Chestertown, and later at the University of Maryland. After graduating in law, he opened an office in Chestertown, where he enjoyed a large practice. He was a member of the Board of Visitors of Washington College and President of the Chestertown Bank of Maryland.

He is survived by a widow and two daughters, Miss Ellen C., and Mary Page Beck, four sisters, Mrs. Allan A. Harris and Mrs. John N. Roberts, of Chestertown, and Mrs. J. A. Bradley and Miss Isabel Beck, of Baltimore, and three brothers, Messrs. Horace, of St. Louis, Samuel and Henry C. Beck, of Shreveport, La. The body was brought to Rock Hall by the Chester River boat yesterday and from there to Chestertown and funeral services will be held today, Saturday, at 2 p. m. in the Protestant E[piscopal] Church, Chestertown, conducted by Rev. Charles L. Atwater. Burial will be in St. Paul's cemetery. The bearers will be Judge L. W. Wickes, M. J. Mandelbaum, S. Scott Beck, W. H. Bryan, J. A. Bradley, C. Reynolds Bedford, H. W. Vickers and Allan A. Harris. The honorary bearers will be Governor Ritchie, Senator John Walter Smith, Judge Oscar Lesser, J. Enos Ray, Charles M. Cohn, Carville D. Benson, Edward Hammond, Judge Adkins, Judge T. D. Keating, Charles C. Wallis, Dr. Victor Cullen, Harvey D. Cooper, John H. Patterson, John M. Dennis and the directors of the Chestertown Bank of Maryland. C. L. Dodd, funeral director.

Dr. Wilbur Fisk Massey, "The Grand Old Man of Southern Farming", author, journalist and hosticulturist, died at his home, Friday, March 30 about five o'clock, after having suffered from the effects of a stroke of paralysis with which he was stricken last Christmas Eve.

Dr. Massey was an indefatigable worker right up to the time of his being taken ill and notwithstanding his advanced age, 83, answered yearly thousands of letters of inquiry on various phasas of agriculture.

He was a gentleman of the old school, chivalrous, kind and with a bearing which signalled him out from the masses on many occasions.

After finishing high school, he attended Washington College and latter Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. After finishing his college career, he engaged in civil engineering work in the west and for a period was assistant in the office of his uncle, Secretary of State in Missouri.

About the time of the Civil War, he came back to Kent County where for several years he served as superintendant of schools.

From Kent he went to Baltimore and engaged in the nursery business. Later he went to Philadelphia as editor of The Practical Farmer and was probably the best known agricultural authority in the south and his advice on agricultural work was sought in all sections of the country and even in Europe.

The honorary degree of Doctor of science was conferred a few years ago by North Carolina State College while he also held the degree of Civil Engineer from Dickinson College.

While in North Carolina he was the promulgator of cow peas for soil improvement, and later introduced the use of crimson clover as a producer of legumes as means of vitalizing and increasing the productiveness of the soil, thus making possible the rotation of crops in the Southern States.

A recent issue of the rural New Yorker said of him:

"We have been hoping against hope that this kindly friend who has so endeared himslf to our readers would recover and resume something of his work. That seems impossible now, and we are forced to report that the earthly service of our good comrade is well nigh ended. He fought a good fight and lived a clean, honorable and useful life. The world is better and more beautiful because he lived in it. He helped his fellew man, and now lying under the hard hand of affliction he may know that his work is appreciated."

Besides his wife, Dr. Massey is survived by three sons: Charles F., of Salisbury N. C., Albert, a lawer of New York city and Ballard, a member of the faculty of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg. Five daughters: Miss Nellie, who made her home with him, Miss Mabel, of Williamsburg, Va. Mrs. Frances Stansel, El Paso, Texas; Mrs. Winnifred Nichol, Oklahoma, and Mrs Bessie Thompkins, Atlanta Ga., also survive.

The deceased was a constant and faithful member of Asbury M. E. Church, Salisbury where funeral services were held on Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Six members of the Masonic Lodge, of which he was a member, acted as pall bearers. The body was brought to Chestertown and laid to rest beside that of his first wife.

Mrs. Josephine Truitt, died at her home on High treet, early Wednesday morning after a lingering illness, aged 69 years. The deceased had been silk for more than a year and during her long illness had the constant and loving attention of her devoted daughters. She leaves seven daughters as follows: Mrs. McKendrie Patrick, Mrs. Oliver White, Mrs. William Patrick, of Chestertown; Mrs. William A. Dadds, of Wilmington; Mrs. George Latham, of Chestertown; Miss Lillie Truitt, of Washington and Mrs. William A. Bexley at home, also twenty-four grand children and twelve great grand children; also three sisters, Mrs. James H. Cooper, Mrs. Frank Smith and Mrs. John Latham, all of Chestertown.

The funeral services were held at her late residence on Friday morning at 11 a. m., conducted by Rev. C. L. Atwater. The pall bearers were her grandsons, Romie, George, William and Norman Patrick and William and Geo. White. Interment in Chester cemetery. C. L. Dodd, undertaker.

EASTER TRUMPETS

I met the herald jonquils
Amid the grass today,
They trooped, the little trumpeters,
In glad and green array;
Each held a golden bugle,
And each a spear of green,
They said that they were messengers
From April's misty queen.

Spring gave a swift direction,
Mayhap it was the blue bird's pipe,—
They straighten up in line;
There came a rushing whisper,
A hidden counter-sign,—
A mystic sudden breeze;
It tossed their little horns on high,
Their trumpets to the trees.

They blew a golden message,
A shout of love and spring,
A tip-toe blast of just one word—
A word for stars to sing;
They tossed their living trumpets,
The word they blew and blew—
And the word, O Lord of Life, the word
Was You! You! You!

Local Auto Firm Doing Big Business

The automobile business is like a clock—it runs on unceasingly. It is seldom closes its doors—always rendering service to the public. The Noland-Bennett-Russell Co. is a good example of one of these up-to-date concerns, seldom closing its doors to the public. As sales agents for the Buick and the Chevrolet, this firm has a big advertisement on page 2. Read it and you may find just what you want there in that list of rare bargains and splendid cars. If not, their big adv. next week may have what you want. At any rate, read their advertisements both in this week's and in next week's issues.
