Investment in Telephone Plant

Maryland's telephone system is constantly growing. Last year, for example, there was a net increase of 8,400 telephones in the state. To secure this net increase, however, the gross number of telephones installed was 24,500—the difference between the gross number and the net number being the telephones discontinued.

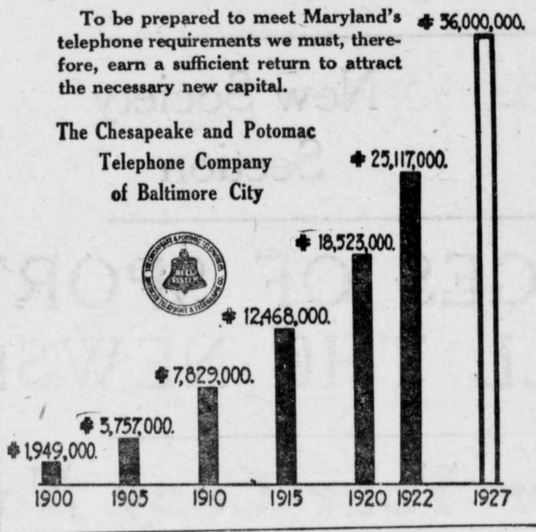

These new telephones require extensions to the telephone plant—additional wires, poles, conduits, cables, central office switchboards and equipment, sometimes new buildings and always telephone instruments and associated apparatus.

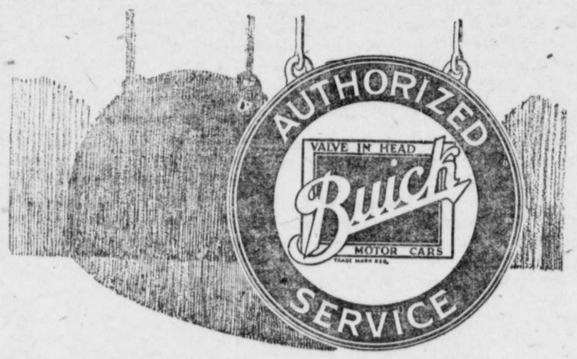

Our investment in telephone plant, therefore, grows greater and greater each year. We are now anticipating the future service requirements of the State of Maryland and are making plans for the extensions necessary. The accompanying chart shows how our investment in Maryland has mounted since 1900 and what we expect it to be at the end of 1927, five years hence.

These constant extensions mean a constant requirement for new capital. This must come from persons who have money to invest, and only those industries which can earn enough to pay a fair return for the use of this money can expect to attract the investor.

To be prepared to meet Maryland's telephone requirements we must, therefore, earn a sufficient return to attract the necessary new capital.

TORTOISES HAVE LONG LIFE

Allotted Span of Three Score Years and Ten Without Significance to Those Creatures.

What animal lives the longest? Probably the tortoise, though we cannot be quite sure. According to Mr. Frederic A. Lucas in Natural History, three historic tortoises probably have attained the greatest ages definitely recorded for any animals.

A tortoise from the Aldabra islands that is still living at St. Helena, says Mr. Lucas, has the distinction of being the only creature now alive that saw the great Napoleon, who died more than a century ago. How old the tortoise was when brought to St. Helena we do not know, but, venerable as it seems to us with our allotted span of threescore years and ten, it is not so old as another tortoise, which is—or recently was—living on the island of Mauritius, whither it was brought from the Seychelles many years before, being even then of unusual size. In Mauritius it became a national possession and in 1810 was specifically mentioned in the treaty by which the French ceded the island to England. It is said to have been living in Mauritius for at least seventy years, so that it is pretty safe to conclude that it is at least one hundred and fifty years old.

That tortoise has been confounded with another, which was brought to England in 1897, and which now is preserved in the Rothschild museum at Tring. It was certainly more than one hundred and fifty years old at the time of its death—probably it was nearer two hundred years—and it is the largest known tortoise. It is reported to have attained the weight of five hundred and sixty pounds.

THEIR CHIEF DESIRE IS NOISE

Queer "Musical" Instruments That Are In Use Among the Savage Tribes In Africa.

When visitors of prominence tour Africa they are greeted by the most amazing efforts on the part of a native band. One of the favorite instruments is a huge zylophone, many yards in length, upon which a score of blacks whack and bang to their hearts' content. Those at one end pound small pieces of wood, which give out high notes, while pieces of considerable size supply the bass tones. A few empty petrol tins placed here and there give drum effects. As a rule the savage prefers something that he can bang, but any noise is better than none. In the east, wild music is played on pipes made of bamboo, while hollow gourds of various sizes provide the African savage with home-grown flutes, clarinets and bassoons. Sometimes he will arrange them so that they form a kind of piano. He sits surrounded by a circle of dried fruits, whose hollow skins give out high or low notes, according to their size, as he taps them with his fingers.

Glands Are Funny Things.

Why is it that military music makes one want to march; that jazz music makes one want to dance, and plaintive music makes one sad Science has discovered that it is all due to a little gland situated at the base of one's brain, and it controls the rhythmic beating of the heart. It prevents it—and other organs of the body—from racing, or working irregularly.

Martial music excites the pituitary gland very much, and in response the gland manufactures and sends into one's blood more than its normal amount of fluid. It is this fluid that controls the speed of one's heart, and with the extra amount one's heart beats much faster, giving one that exhilarated military feeling.

Another type of music acts on the pituitary gland in just the opposite way—it slows it down, with an accompanying depression or sadness.—Detroit News.

How the Great Pyramid Was Built.

They worked in relays of 100,000 men, continuously, each relay for three months. The people spent ten years upon the ramp over which they dragged the stones, a work not less, in my judgment, than that of building the pyramid itself. . . . The ten years, I mean, were expended upon this ramp, and the work upon the mound upon which the pyramids stood, and upon the chambers underground. . . . The time occupied in building the pyramid itself was 20 years.—Herodotus in his "History," 450 B. C.

The Significant Present.

A genuine love of your own time is the recognition of what you meet in it, of those best moments which crave to be made accessible even for the remotest of ages following. To immortalize any given moment, however, is to take it out of the temporary and somehow to find a language for it so general in its appeal that hereafter it may preserve in its own significance the trivial circumstances from which it first arose.—John Erskine.

Westminster Abbey Bells.

It is only on very rare occasions, for instance, such as a royal wedding, that the peal of the Westminster abbey bells is heard. The tenor bell is very old, dating from 1430, and two of the others were presented by Gabriel Goodman, dean of Westminster in Queen Elizabeth's time. The octave was incomplete, however, until some time ago, when two additional bells were added, and the existing six were at the same time rehung and tuned.
