He favors them because of their pre - med programs, he said.

Julian Lewis, Poly's athletic director, said he was aware of Lloyd's growth in the one and one half years he has known him.

"He's developed physically, matured emotionally and has improved his grades," Lewis said. "That's the kind of growth we want to see in a kid."

Bucky Kimmett, the team's coach, thinks all of its members are working to fulfill their potential.

"I don't think any of them will stay down," Kimmett said in appraising the character and maturity of his charges. "Our kids can all go to college."

CATCHING A GLIMPSE OF THE STARS — Lorrie Wainwright, Kim McGregor, Denise Sims and Wayne Overstreet came down to be a part of the excitement and, Lorri said, "To be able to say 'I saw a David Wingate dunk.' "

THIS IS THE YEAR!: Steve Daniels (in turtleneck and cap) said he came to the game because, "This is the year Baltimore has the top teams in the country."

Stallions used for charity auction

The stud services of 20 Maryland stallions will be auctioned off to raise money for a charity that hopes to establish a temporary home for families of seriously ill children.

Officials with the Ronald McDonald House announced Tuesday they hoped to raise $150,000 to $200,000 at the Jan. 30 auction. That money would be added to the $350,000 already raised for the $1.2 million home.

Race horse breeders say the studding services of Run The Gantlet, a stallion owned by Jerry Hoffberger's Sunset Hill Farm, may bring in as much as $40,000 to $50,000. Run The Gantlet sired April Run, who finished second in the 1980 Washington, DC International and Providential II, who won this year's International.

Other stallions whose siring services standard stud fee is $25,000, and Restless Native, who has sired 191 winners and is owned by Sagamore Farm.

About 400 people are expected to pay $100 each to attend the auction, which will be held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Bedford Produce offers city folk country food

Many of Baltimore's residents have roots in countryfied living. One of the things missed dearly by most of those who do have such roots is the ingredients and touch that go into the simple and nourishing foods of countryfied cooking.

Those who are suffering such deprivation might think of visiting a man who trucks into town twice a week, bringing some of the country with him.

Walter Bedford provides city dwellers the opportunity to eat the fresh and wholesome foods they do not often get a chance to in these days of canned greens, frozen meats and cross country trucking.

At the Waverly municipal parking lot on Saturdays (Barclay St. between 32nd and 33rd) and at the inner harbor Sundays he sells fruits, vegetables and smoked meats, all produced on his farm a few minutes away near Randallstown, Md.

Collards, spinach, sweet potatoes, Virginia smoked hams (cured with brown sugar and molasses as he was taught by his father and grandfather while growing up in Virginia), sausages (smoked or fresh), bosc pears, and delicious, golden delicious and winesap apples are among the farm-fresh delights he sells from the back of his covered pick up truck.

Bedford has clung to the farming life, one of beating the sun up in the morning and working long and hard outdoors, he said, because he loves the land and the lifestyle.

"He's said he's always been a farmer at heart," said Reginald Bedford, Walter's son, who with his wife, Marcelyne, assists Walter on weekends.

"Little did I know I was marrying into this," Marcelyne said, causing a wide grin to spread across her father-in-law's face. "But I like it," she said with a grin of her own as she bagged a customer's order.

Baltimoreans can benefit from all the care and hard work he puts in without spending too much. His prices are reasonable.

Large, crisp pears were only 50 cents per pound. Two dollars fetched a pound of lean, fraggrant, homemade sausage or 20 good-sized winesap apples.

Marcelyne and Reginald certainly take advantage of their country connections, often trading with other farmers for goods not produced by Walter.

"I keep the freezer packed," Reginald said.

"Our kids won't eat anything out of a can," Marcelyne added.

Reginald Bedford said they would continue to come to market until we run out of things to sell." He said despite the cold they probably would continue through the middle of January.

Marvin Davis, Chairman planned for the guests to be greeted by the Baltimore Poly - Tech swing band, which was great. The full band sound by youngsters who could read music and play recognizable tunes was a welcome departure from the usual Combo type music.

The Band playing Christmas music set a happy note at the onset and the candies, poinsettias and holly decorated mountains of deserts put everyone in the holiday mood.

"Committee X - 71 found its origin in 1971 as the planning committee for a Christmas party to entertain the group and its friends.

Committee X - 71 in its first 10 years has cemented the bond of friendship amongst men of diverse backgrounds and personalities who have found in each other's humor, integrity, candor, and resolve a ready source of strength.

The 10th anniversary Christmas Party, as all others, according to members, is 'an expression of Love to those dear to us for whom we are grateful for their being

Surprise Birthday Party for Bob Clay

By Pattie Hodges,
AFRO Women's Editor

Laurel contractor Robert "Bob" Clay got the surprise of his life when he was hosted at a surprise party in honor of his natal day Tuesday, Dec. 15.

Held at The Ritz Supper Club, the fete was hosted by his wife Gerietta, who had whispered the secret to me at an event on that previous Saturday.

Even though the snow was falling outside, this did nothing to lessen the good cheer inside as guests gathered at 8 p.m. to celebrate with Bob.

They, along with the honoree and his wife, enjoyed the lively disco music and much animated conversation.

On the menu were delicious hot hors d'oeuvres and cocktails, and, the champagne flowed like water.

There were two delectable cheesecakes for those who had a sweet tooth and of course, Bob was presented his special birthday cake.

For a snowy evening, it turned out to be a lively one.

Guests on hand to celebrate with Bob included Judge William "Billy" Murphy, Ray Haysbert, Parks Sausage exec; Otis Warren of Century 21 Realty; Karl Gilbert, Peggy Boozer, Vivian Turner and Ronald Hayes.

Swinging Set Xmas Party

The Swinging Set Social Club had their annual Christmas Party Saturday, Dec. 12 at the home of Mrs. Carrie Brown Tinicia, secretary - treasurer.

Guests enjoyed a delicious dinner, members exchanged gifts and both members and guests listened to a variety of Christmas songs.

Mrs. Tinicia's home was beautifully decorated and she was a lovely hostess.

Other club members included Mrs. Anna Davis, Mrs. Jahpine Middleton, Mrs. Christine Middleton and Mrs. Lessie Fuller.
