PLANTING THE TREE
By Henry Abbey

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the ship which will cross the see;
We plant the mast to carry the sails;
We plant the plank to withstand the gales;
The keel, the keelson, the beam the knee;
We plant the ship when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the house for you and me;
We plant the rafters, the shingles, the floors;
We plant the studding, lath, and doors,
The beams, the siding, all parts that be;
We plant the house when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
A thousand things that we daily see;
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag;
We plant the staff for our countries flag;
We plant the shade from the hot sun free—
We plant all these when we plant the tree.

POULTRY NOTES

Reds are doing well at Storrs, Connecticut, this year, leading the contest on April 9th, with White Wyandottes in second place, White Leghorns third and White Rocks fourth. For the month of March, the Reds made a clean sweep, one pen of ten pullets laying 24 eggs, another pen of Red pullets laying 24 eggs, and the third pen 233 eggs. Twenty three and twenty-four eggs per bird for a month are high averages for a whole pen to make. Total March egg production for the whole contest was not as good as for March, 1922 by 750 eggs, the drop being attributed to the use of electric lights this year which greatly increased winter production.

Crop forecasting is a hazardous business. Perhaps one man's guess is as good as another. But, it would seem reasonable to advise the poultryman that 1923 is a good year for him to grow some feed, and it is always sound council to tell the new man about to buy land for aa poultry farm to get enough acreage so that he can grow some grain. That available land should be put into grain this year is advice based on several signs of the times. We have had a bumper corn crop for several years, and according to the law of averages it is about time that we might experience some decrease in this grain. Spring is starting late. Spring wheat planting in the northwest will be delayed. There is agitation to reduce the acreage. Winter wheat in western Kansas is hit by drought. Farm labor is scarce. The poultryman should have some home-grown grain.

After the cockerals have been marketed as broilers at 10 to 12 weeks of age, the pullets may be fed a scratch feed composed of equal parts of cracked corn, whole oats and wheat, and a mash composed of 10 parts of ground oats, 10 parts of ground corn, parts of flour middlings and 7½ parts of tankage. This is an especially good ration for pullets of the dual-purpose breeds that are on a farm range. They can continue to receive it until early winter, when buttermilk may be added as a supplement to increase egg production and of course, buttermilk is also fine for growing chickens. The number of eggs laid by six differently fed pens at Iowa Agricultural College from Nov. 1 to July 1, totaled as follows:

With buttermilk to drink....2257 eggs
15 per cent dried buttermilk..2086 eggs
20 per cent meat scraps....1574 eggs
21.8 per cent meat scraps...1484 eggs
20 per cent tankage.....1507 eggs
No animal protein..... 805 eggs

If a chicken from white-plumage and white-legged parents shows blueish-colored shanks, it will have such colored shanks when mature. Chickens from buff-colored, white legged parents—like the Buff Orphington—are hatched with yellowish or reddish-yellow shanks, but these shanks gradually fade to the regulation white. The chickens of the Barred Plymouth Rock frequently show a greenish-yellow shank or one mottled with black. They are generally pullets and the shanks generally turn to the desired yellow. If the shanks are yellow—not orange—when the chicks are hatched, they frequently become too light in color. But, strange as it may appear, if the chicks from williow-legged birds are hatched with yellow shanks, the shanks in time will become willow. The shanks of Black Orpington chicks at first are not black, but are somewhat mottled or black near the hocks and lower down a pinkish yellow, writes Thos. F. McGrew in Western Poultry Journal. The crested breeds, Polish and Houdans, have a protuberance from the top of the head which forms the base of the crest, and the larger the protuberance the larger will be the crest, so that one can estimate quite accurately, the size of the crest the adult fowl will have, as soon as the chick is hatched.

PRAISE FOR DR. PARKES CADMAN

The following article concerning Dr. Parkes Cadman, who has spoken here many times, recently appeared in the Christian Advocate:

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, who is still a Wesleyan in his British church fellowships, though now serving a great Congregational church, was the subject of a remarkable five-column eulogy in the Brooklyn Eagle of April 16, from the pen of Professor W. J. Thompson of Drew Theological Seminary. Dr. Thompson regards him as "having no superior among 180,000 American clergymen," and says "Roman Catholic priests, Jewish rabbis, Protestant clergymen of New York made him their unanimous choice to deliver the address on the 300 anniversary of the Founding of the First Christian Church on Manhattan Island. On Sundays he is heard over the radio by 500,000 people." The pen portrait of the great preacher is drawn with infinite and loving pains, and is a brilliant piece of biography, or "psychography," as Gamaliel Bradford names his own art of intimate portraiture. The closing sentences are: "Dr. Cadman is now at his meridian. When his afternoon shall come and gone, and his twilight shall be over, then in the English-speaking Preachers Hall of Fame his statue will arise, and upon it will be this inscription: 'The Reverend Samuel Parkes Cadman, D. D., LL. D., one of the greatest pulpit and platform forces for righteousness in the Twentieth Century.'"
