Concord Baptist celebrates its 45th anniversary

Concord Baptist Church will celebrate their 45th anniversary in an anniversary and founders day celebration, Sunday, June 27, 11:00 a.m., with Rev. Marcus G. Wood, Providence Baptist Church, as guest speaker.

A musical program, rendered by the 40th Anniversary Choir under the direction of James Royster, will be featured in the evening services which begin at 7:30 p.m.

Area ministers participated in week - long anniversary services which led up to the June 27 celebration. The services began, Monday, June 14 and ended this week with Friday services conducted by Rev. Herman Ford of Fountain Baptist Church. Rev. Matthew R. Silver is the pastor.

Other visiting ministers at the 7:30 p.m. services were Rev. Willard Clayton, Macedonia Baptist Church; Rev. Lawyer L. Swinson, New Metropolitan Baptist Church and Rev. William W. Payne, City Temple Baptist Church.

Celebrating its long survival, the theme for the 45th anniversary celebration is "Concord Remembering the Past, Dedicating the Present, Preparing for the Future."

Founded in 1937, Concord Baptist Church was established under the leadership of Rev. William D. White, then pastor of Fountain Baptist Church.

Incorporating the church and bringing many of the former members of Fountain Baptist to Concord, Rev. White selected its name because it meant "harmony."

During its early history, the church building was almost closed down because the small congregation was unable to meet the mortgage payments. Rallying together, the church members, along wi Trustees Willie Scott and Peter Mitchell.

Through an agreement with the building owner, the church raised enough money to purchase the building from Regnel AME Church. Dinners, musicals, fashion shows and even mortgaged homes helped save the church.

After this crisis which was the first major setback for Concord members, the church congregation grew and additional organizations were established.

The Missionary Society, Usher Board, the Flower Circle, the Baptist Training Union and the Young Peoples' Choir were all organized under Rev. White's leadership.

Continuing his crusade to help small churches, Rev. White along with Rev. E. W. White, Provident Baptist Church, founded a unnamed organization to give financial support to small churches suffering from financial difficulties.

In 1943, Rev. White died. He was succeeded in November 1944 by the Rev. J. M. Raynor of Goldsboro, N.C. who paid off the entire mortgage of the church within two years.

When Rev. Raynor came to the church, he found a mortgage of $7,000 and a church with 300 members. With barbecues, invitations to area churches to share in worship services and contributions from church members of $3016 the building fund, Concord Baptist was able to burn the mortgage in December 1946.

Under Rev. Raynor, the membership grew and new organizations were formed. Among them were the Ladies Aide, Busy Bees, King's Daughter, the Male Chorus, the Gospel Chorus, an All Girl's Choir, the Junior Deacons, the Rosebuds, Junior Ushers, Senior Choir II and the Matrons.

Before Rev. Raynor's death in the summer of 1959, he renovated the interior of the church including lavatories, a kitchen, coat rooms, choir rooms, a trustee room and choir lofts.

On March 13, 1960, Rev. Matthew R. Silver accepted the pastorate at Concord. Since the old church building was condemned to make way for an interstate highway, a new search for another building began in 1968.

The church home, the Liberty Jewish Center, was destroyed by fire which forced Concord members to relocate by fire which forced Concord members to relocate to the present day address in October 1969. The church is now located at 5204 Liberty Heights Ave.

Under Rev. Silver's leadership, a vacation Bible school was organized and religious education courses were offered. In 1972, he established a scholarship fund for high school graduates, assisted by the White's Memorial Circle.

Church leader stresses music training

By John W. Templeton

Even though the musical tradition of black religion goes back centuries, too many churches take their music for granted, and it shows, says Mrs. Willie Eva Smith, a nationally known expert in the music of the black church.

Mrs. Smith visited Richmond, Va., for a week to give church music workshops at the Riverview Baptist Church, pastored by Rev. Ralph Reavis. Her stay was topped off by a concert by her students at the church. "Music is very, very important," said Mrs. Smith in an interview. "It's just native to the black church and that stems in large part due to our African heritage."

Mrs. Smith, an Alabama native who taught music from the elementary to junior college level in California for 24 years, has been leading church music workshops since 1974.

She is the organist for the winter board of the National Baptist Convention and an official of the Gospel Music Workshop of America. She also owns a music publishing house that carries more than 1,000 gospel titles.

"In the black church, the predominance of musicians are self-trained and have been doing the best they could," said Mrs. Smith. "My thrust is that we serve an excellent God and he deserves excellent worship."

"I say that if you've been occupying that organ for 30 years and you haven't improved yourself through training and workshop, then you are asking for the day when the minister comes up to you and says "We have another organist," said Mrs. Smith.

"Teachers, doctors, lawyers all have continuing education to keep fresh."

She has authored two books "The Minister of Music and "O Sing Unto the Lord a New Song," a complete handbook for the pastoral church music program.

Mrs. Smith encourages churches to have a minister of music, who maintains a training program, a teaching voice, piano and organ to both young and old. She also thinks choirs should be versatile.

"I am against using five choirs," she said. "You should have one choir and teach them to sing everything, 'anthems, spirituals and all.'"

Her message appears to be getting across. "A lot of people have heard my workshops and have decided to go back to college to get music degrees," added the music specialist.

Her itinerary for the year is a busy one: Shreveport, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Oakland, San Jose, Columbia, S. C., Greenville, SC, Petersburg, Hawaii and Ohio through the first half.

Mt. Lebanon plans fourth move

It was February 1924 when the Mt. Lebanon Church was organized. Nearly 60 years later, on May 8, 1982 Mt. Lebanon family plunged forward with—faith—and had groundbreaking ceremonies at 281214 Reisterstown Rd., where the new church will be built.

The Rev. Dr. Olin P. Moyd is pastor. A member of the church said, it is by faith in God that we will successfully fulfill the dream of our pastor, Dr. Moyd, to construct a new church.

It is also by faith that his dream to expand the church membership in spirit and in number fulfilled. For 1982, the church has added numerous new ministries with much emphasis being placed on church growth and community outreach.

These expanding ministries have been added to meet the expanding needs of the community, the unchurched and the membership.

The Rev. Meade
