The Busy Man—His Bible.

The Bible is still the most popular book.

Leaders in the arts, the law, science and literature read it during the intervals of labor in their workaday world, it is shown by a survey.

And its interest is as wide as the interests of men and women.

The soldier finds his master story of combat in the narrative of that contest between David and Goliath.

The singer delights in the exalted musical verse of the Psalms.

The newspaper writer finds the master feature story in the detailed, compact, picturesque account of Jehu's descent on Jesrell and the death of Jezabel.

The philosopher pores over the deep an dtrue conversations in the life of Job.

The dreamer dreams afresh of the beauty and vision of Isaiah.

The practical mind finds much practical advice in Proverbs.

The lawyer learns from the perfect oratory of Paul on Mar's Hill and the presentation of his case before King Agrippa.

The poet learns anew the masterpieces of Solomon.

The laborer learns the nobility of labor.

All men say they find in it the Magna Charta of the world.

Kent Schools Open For Fall Term

The schools of Kent county opened Monday of last week with unusually large enrollments. The farmers, as well as the town people, seem to be realizing the necessity of their children getting an education to succeed in these modern times and are really making sacrifices to keep their children in school.

The increased enrollments in all the high schools is another indication of this feeling.

When She Leaves Home

YOUR daughter will always look back with affection, perhaps pride, to the home she is now growing up in. To her, it all has a deeper significance. She will remember this stair with a smile for the days she slid down its banister, and the day she came down half-glad, half-sad, in her wedding dress. This door she opened so often for Dad, and in later years, another; that window, where she watched for their coming; these dressers and china closets, linked with Mother's first teaching of household science. The woodwork of your home should be worthy of its place in the lives of all your family. If you expect to build a new home, think of the woodwork as you plan, so that it will be harmonious, and so that you can use stock items.

If you expect to remodel, think what an improvement new woodwork will be! How the housewife will appreciate new interior trim, better windows, good doors, convenient kitchen dressers, beautiful china closets and bookcases.

You will find our Woodwork beautiful in design, and well made. It insures satisfaction to all users.
