If You Ask Me

By Bettye Moss

The rites were Wednesday evening at Trinity Presbyterian Church, where Mrs. Branch was an ordained elder, trustee and deacon. Rev. William Berlin officiated.

Baltimore Continental president, Dr. Sue Jones, presided at the club rites. Assisting were Helen Quarles, vice president; Marlene Mohomed, the chaplin; and Audrey Harden, Minnie Green, and Marnette Jackson.

Club members who came from the D.C. chapter were, Gloria Haynes and Pauline Lamar.

Cuff notes: Under Mrs. Branch's leadership, Baltimore Continentals initiated the important charities' committee which has helped hundreds of young people. Her group was among the first to give to the Louis E. Harmon Scholarship Fund for the YMCA Camp King's Landing.

Many remember Mrs. Branch as a concerned employee at the Neighborhood Youth Corps and the Constant Care Community Health Center before her retirement a year ago.

Survivors: Her husband, Norman; (they were sweethearts in Douglass High back in 1938); son, Barrington Lee; sisters, Mamie High and Louise Smith; brothers, James and Theodore Smith, N.Y.; grandson, Michael; and daughter-in-law, Ann.

Stable prices make home heating easier

(UPI) — Marylanders should have an easier time heating their homes this winter because of a stabilization in energy prices and temperatures that are forecasted to be lower than usual.

The price of home heating oil has dropped, natural gas prices have outlined, and the National Weather Service reports temperatures in Maryland may be slightly above normal through the end of December.

Although natural gas prices haven't decreased, they're not increasing as rapidly as last year, when the gas heating bills of Baltimore Gas and Electric Co. customers shot up an average of 27 percent.

BG&E officials said customers should expect to pay 3.9 percent more for heat than last winter, assuming they use the same amount of gas.

"So the gas outlook is considerably brighter this winter than last," said BG&E Spokesman Charles Franklin. "And supply doesn't appear to have any clouds on the horizon."

But Franklin noted that there were above-normal temperatures last winter also, and that during a normal winter people will use more gas. That means heating bills for the entire winter would increase more than 3.9.

"A colder winter than last winter is going to produce higher bills for customers," Franklin said.

Customers who heat with electricity will pay 1.2 percent more if their usage is comparable to last year, he said.

By contrast, people who heat with oil may end up paying less, than last year. Current prices for home heating oil are as much as nine cents a gallon less than last year's prices.

Despite the favorable outlook for most customers, many Marylanders will still have trouble paying for home heating and more than 80,000 of them are expected to apply for fuel assistance in the state.
