The Fame of That Wonderful Vanilla Ice-cream Spread Near and Far

In those days, a quarter of a century ago, nearly every family made its own ice-cream. Two young men, Henry & Lee Gill, decided to make ice-cream for sale, because they enjoyed making—and eating—it at home.

They knew that merely "good" ice-cream would not be good enough, for most home-made ice-cream was good.

So they worked, studied and experimented until their vanilla ice-cream had a new smoothness, a finer flavor, an added richness.

They opened a little shop to make this new and better ice-cream for the fine families of the town.

Wherever Gill Bros. Ice-cream was served, the guests commented on its deliciousness. Then they ordered it for their own homes. The fame of the fine flavor spread near and far.

And people drove in from miles around to get that wonderful vanilla ice-cream.

The little business had to expand to meet the ever-growing demand. The brothers added more freezers—They outgrew their little shop, and duilt larger and still larger.

Other ice-cream makers began buying Gill Bros. Ice-cream for their most particular trade; and dealers in other towns wanted Gill Bros. to insure the success of their ice-cream "parlors," as ice-cream stores then were called.
